Committee Cuts WPA Request by $150,000,000

Step Is Roosevelt's First Setback This Year; 500,000 May Be Put Off Rolls

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt's request for [illegible],000,000 to run WPA for another [illegible] months yesterday was pruned $125,000,000 by a House Appropriations sub-committee.

The sub-committee also imposed a strict prohibition on civil service average for 30,000 members of the WPA field administrative staff and 3,000 administrative workers in Washington.

Dealing the President his first setback of the new Congress, a bill providing for the $150,000,000 cut in the Administration's estimates as introduced in the House immediately following the sub-committee action.

Roosevelt Opposes Cut

Sources close to the WPA said the cash, if ratified by the full committee and approved by both houses of Congress, would mean a reduction of 492,000 in relief rolls if the full force of the cut is applied in February.

President Roosevelt declined direct comment, but made clear his own stand for the original amount. He suggested that reporters figure out how many will have to be thrown off relief if the sub-committee's figure is approved.

The President said he himself has to think of the individual human beings, men, women and children, as well as finances. Asked if Congress didn't have to think of them too, he said he was not commenting on what Congress should do, but speaking for himself.

Minority Leaders on Air

House and Senate Republican leaders meanwhile took the air in broadcast attack on Administration spending, relief and trade agreement policies. Both Senate Minority Leader McNary and House Minority Leader Martin appealed for an end to "politics in relief" and joined in attacking elevation of former Works Progress Administrator Hopkins to the Cabinet.

Sub-committee agreement on $125,000,000 to carry WPA from February through June 30 must run the gauntlet of the full House Appropriations Committee tomorrow before the completed bill goes to the floor of the House tomorrow afternoon.

It was learned that two efforts for even deeper slashes—one to appropriate only $300,000,000 and another $800,000,000—were defeated in the sub-committee before the $150,000,000 decrease received majority support.

W. O. P. to Seek Further Cut

That figure apparently was decided on as a compromise at a leadership conference late Monday, after President Roosevelt had been advised of strong House sentiment for WPA retrenchment.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the appropriations committee, announced House Republicans will ask further reduc-

'Come and Get Me,' 'Suicide' Phones Police—They Do

"I'm going to jump off the Calvert Street Bridge. Come down and get me."

That was the telephone message the Eighth Precinct Station received yesterday.

A scout car went to the bridge and arrested 19-year-old Alfred A. Smith, CCC worker, who gave his address as 1300 Massachusetts avenue southeast. He admitted he was absent without leave from a camp in Rock Creek Park.

Smith walked over to the police car when it arrived and pointed to a small bottle of iodine lying nearby, saying he had swallowed the contents. He was sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Fair and Colder Today, With 10-Degree Drop

The temperature today will range about 10 degrees lower than for the past few days, the Weather Bureau reported last night, predicting fair and colder today. Temperature last year at this time was 23 to 35.

The mercury climbed up to 63 degrees yesterday at 4 p. m., continuing Washington's balmy, springlike weather. The low was 45 degrees.

Senate Group Unanimous For Murphy

Frankfurter Witnesses Irk Committee by Raising Jewish Issue

While one Senate sub-committee yesterday was approving unanimously President Roosevelt's nomination of Frank Murphy to be Attorney General another was hearing three witnesses oppose confirmation of Felix Frankfurter for the Supreme Court.

A third was preparing to call today three newspapermen in a hearing on selection of Harry L. Hopkins to be Secretary of Commerce.

Without hearings, one Judiciary sub-committee sent Murphy's nomination to the full committee, where action is expected in the next week or ten days.

Witnesses Irk Committee

The second heard two witnesses refer frequently to Frankfurter's Jewish birth and alien origin, and committee members voiced resentment at the course of their arguments. A third witness urged that before any action was taken Frankfurter be questioned on points of constitutional law in a court case which the witness, Wade H. Cooper, Washington banker, had lost.

All three witnesses appeared at their own request. Last night some committee members friendly to Frankfurter were considering calling the nominee to the witness stand to clear up the contention of George E. Sullivan, lawyer and writer, on what he called "anti-subversive" subjects. He said that, through the American Civil Liberties Union, Frankfurter had been associated with William Z. Foster, the Communist. The organization itself, Sullivan said, is engaged in defending the right to overthrow the government by force.

Classed With Litvinoff

Sullivan also said that in September, 1937, Frankfurter and Maxim Litvinoff, Russian foreign minister, were "elected to the 'Jewish hall of fame' among '120 greatest living Jews.'" He added that Frankfurter made no protest.

"If Litvinoff and Frankfurter belong to the same group," he said, "surely neither of them belongs on the Supreme Court."

Sullivan particularly emphasized Frankfurter's alien birth and what he called his "alien-mindedness."

Dean C. Acheson, Washington attorney serving as counsel for Frankfurter, carefully took notes of the Doctor Denies GHA Row As He Quits

Price Says He Quit Because Patients Had To Wait, Not Because He Wasn't Promoted

Dr. Richard H. Price last night denied reports that the reason for his resignation earlier in the day from the medical staff of Group Health Association was his failure to be promoted.

It was reported that Dr. Price, a general internist, recently told trustees of the Federal employes' clinic he would quit if he were not named medical director. That post is filled by Dr. Raymond E. Selders.

Dr. Price, who said he will enter private practice, did not submit his resignation yesterday to the board of trustees but handed it to Dr. Selders and issued a blast against G. H. A.

Charges Delays

Dr. Price charged that:

Patients often must wait days, even weeks, for an appointment.

They are run through the clinic at 1328 I street northwest like "a herd of sheep."

Many have not yet had the major operations which were promised them.

Frequently, on home calls, a staff physician appears who is strange to the patient. Dr. Price feels that the subscriber is entitled to his "family doctor" at his home as well as the office.

Finally, members are not allowed to take sick leave for clinic visits.

W. C. Kirkpatrick, G. H. A. president, who did not learn of the resignation until he read about it in the newspapers, withheld comment. So did Dr. Raymond E. Selders, medical director of the clinic.

To Quit January 31

Dr. Price said he made his resignation effective as of January 31 and "I shall remain on duty until then unless they make me leave sooner."

He said he has had more than 20 years of medical practice; ten in hospitals, ten as associate medical director for the duPont corporation and a year's research at the National Institute of Health, which he left to join G. H. A.

A few weeks ago he was one of three staff physicians granted courtesy privileges by Garfield Hospital, the first District hospital to admit G. H. A. doctors on the same basis as private practitioners.

New Rhino for Zoo Dotes on Gur, But What Is Gur?

Ordinarily Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park, does not count his rhinoceri before they arrive, but yesterday he sidetracked his policy to sing out the news that a fine Indian rhino is bound for Washington.

The specimen is a male, 3 years old. It was captured in a pitfall by hunters engaged by the forest service of Assam. Full credit for the animal's being consigned to Washington belongs to John Campbell White, American consul general in Calcutta, for whom the animal will be named.

The rhino is now residing in the Alipore Zoological Gardens, Calcutta, pending shipment. He has adapted himself beautifully to captivity on a diet of green grass, milk, rice, sugar and gur, the director said.

"But don't ask me what gur is," he added.

Col. Ruppert, Yankees' Owner, Near Death, Given Last Rites

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—Col. Jacob Ruppert, multimillionaire brewer and owner of the world champion New York Yankees, was so near death tonight that he was given the last sacrament of the Catholic Church, but he dropped asleep making a prediction that he would recover.

RUPPERT

The 71-year-bachelor, a Manhattan real estate titan and one of the Nation's wealthiest men, was reported "resting easily," but still critically ill.

Albert Brennan, Ruppert's right-hand man, said he could not see how Ruppert could survive many more hours the illness that developed into complications from an attack of phlebitis that struck him last April and has confined him much of the time since.

Ruppert's brother, George, and other members of the family were at his bedside in the Ruppert town house.

Among the first to express regret over his illness was Babe Ruth, himself in a hospital after a slight heart attack.

Boston Truck Strike Ends After 1 Is Slain

Agreement Reached As Streets Are Patrolled By Riot Squads

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 10.—Gov. Saltonstall tonight announced an agreement in the death-marked strike of 5,000 truck drivers, which for six days has paralyzed the movement of foodstuffs and freight in this area.

Negotiators had "agreed upon their differences," the Governor said, adding that ratifications would be sought as soon as possible from the major bodies on both sides.

His announcement came while specially-armed police patroled Boston's crowded freight terminals following the death of a truck driver's helper earlier in the day.

John Pimenthall, 50, of Newport, R. I., died at the side of the Providence highway in Sharon today after the occupants of three automobiles pulled him from the cab of a truck and beat him. Chester Hardy, 25, driver, was less seriously beaten.

[Acting United States Attorney John A. Canavan said the fatal beating of Pimenthall, "opened the door to a Federal investigation," the United Press reported. State police who took over investigation of Pimenthall's slaying held six men for questioning.

[Chain stores, whose drivers are affiliated with the striking union, Local 25 of the American Federation of Labor's International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, reported supplies of perishables exhausted and meat and canned goods stores dwindling fast.

[An acute shortage of butter, eggs and other dairy products was reported with 500 carloads strike-bound in yards of the Boston & Maine Railroad.—Editor's note.]

Lieut. McGinness Cleared by Board Of Neglecting Duty

Police Lieut. John W. McGinness, Eleventh Precinct, yesterday was acquitted by a police trial board on a charge of neglect of duty.

McGinness was transferred from the Sixth to the Eleventh Precinct because of his asserted "failure to make immediate and complete investigation" of a holdup which a policeman in a rear room of a store failed to halt.

McGinness' defense was that his failure to make an investigation before reporting off duty made no material difference in the outcome of the robbery.

Matron a Suicide, Coroner Decides

A certificate of suicide will be issued today in the death of Mrs. Olive Frances Duvall, 21-year-old Montgomery County, Md., woman, who died of shotgun wounds Monday, according to Justice of the Peace Charles W. Stang, acting county coroner.

Mrs. Duvall was the wife of Herbert L. Duvall, a farmer. The couple lived near Mount Lebannon Church between Eichison and Damascus. Mrs. Duvall also leaves a 2-year-old daughter.

CAA May Ask 'Baby Airports' Ringing Cities

Proposes to Assist Private Fliers and Commercial Firms

A system of small outlying airports, developed around the larger metropolitan centers and smaller cities, is being considered by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The proposal, suggested for inclusion in the forthcoming report to Congress on the air terminal network of the United States, would be designed to supply landing fields for private and nonscheduled fliers. It also would provide auxiliary facilities for commercial transport planes.

Report Due February 1

Requirements of the private flier are expected to be prominent in the report which probably will be filed, by Administrator Clinton M. Hester, about February 1, because the Authority now is sponsoring expansion of noncommercial aviation and the training of pilots. Furthermore, observers contend that commercial airlines already are "pretty well taken care of."

Aid to Manufacturers

It was learned also that the Authority is considering further indirect aids to manufacturers who develop small and safe planes for individual and personal use. It is planned to encourage built-in safety in aircraft for use by the private flier, G. Grant Mason, CAA member, told a meeting of private fliers several days ago. The authority, he said, hopes to establish a premium for manufacturers in the form of more lenient regulations, if they produce aircraft with safer performance characteristics than the present conventional type.

U. S. Cutter Again Races Death to Isolated Island

By the Associated Press.

The Coast Guard cutter Roger B. Taney made its second race with death yesterday to isolated Jarvis Island in the mid-Pacific. It carried Honolulu surgeons to perform an appendectomy on Manual Pires, colonist.

In October the same boat sailed the 1,500 miles under forced draft in an unsuccessful attempt to save the life of another Hawaiian colonist, Karl Kahlalewai, also stricken with appendicitis.

Quit Fighting, Stokes Urges Relief Heads

Canon Advances Need For United Study of Constructive Points In Lewis Report

Urging that the controversy over the Lewis report on local relief conditions cease, Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, Canon of Washington Cathedral, insisted yesterday that attention should be directed toward the constructive recommendations contained in the report.

Dr. Stokes, however, defended Miss Mary Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare, and Elwood Street, director of public welfare, against criticisms by Burdette G. Lewis, whose report is based on an eight-month investigation of local relief.

Lewis demanded the removal of Miss Hill on the ground of incompetency, and questioned whether Street was qualified to continue in the position he holds.

Drop Unseemly Comments

"May I suggest," Dr. Stokes said, "that it would be in the public interest if all unseemly comments on both sides of this unfortunate controversy should cease, and attention be centered on getting a fair consideration of the proposed new administrative setup, improved relief and employment policies, and additional appropriations called for by Mr. Lewis."

The Lewis report recommends a reorganized and enlarged relief and welfare set-up in which various relief activities would be co-ordinated under one head. He has borne out the contention of Washington citizens, made before Congress at the last session, that the $900,000 appropriation for general relief for the current fiscal year would be inadequate.

"I have read the criticisms in the Lewis report," Dr. Stokes said, "regarding the work of the director of the Department of Public Welfare and the head of the Public Assistance Division.

Street, Miss Hill Defended

"I do not know the specific details on which the charges of inefficiency are based, but I have known Mr. Street well for ten years and Miss Hill for about half this time, and have had many dealings with them in connection with relief problems.

"I have always found them courteous, high-minded, hard-working and responsible public servants trying to do all in their power for the tens of thousands of unemployed—mostly needy—who have sought the aid of the department. I have entire confidence in their integrity and their devotion to the public interest.

"It would be most unfair to them if the failure of Congress in the past to give them the more adequate personnel and financial assistance which their department and many intelligent citizens have constantly sought, and which the report itself calls for, should result in their being unfairly treated now for their failure to make a 100 per cent record.

"They have had to carry a tremendous burden with such small means that case workers have been required to investigate three times as many applicants for help as a private welfare agency would consider possible for good administration. That some errors of judgement have been made under such circumstances was inevitable.

The Washington Industrial Union Council, a C. I. O. organization, criticized the Lewis report, declaring it only had added to the prevailing confusion over local relief.

William Taylor, District Communist Party leader, in an address over radio Station WOL last night, asked whether Lewis, in seeking to oust Board of Public Welfare administrators, was "looking for a job."

Hungary to Invade if Raided Again, Czechs Reported Told

By the Associated Press.

Budapest (Wednesday), Jan. 11.—The independent news service, Informacio, reported today Hungary had warned Czecho-Slovakia another violation of Hungarian frontiers would be answered by prompt invasion.

The service also reported Hungary had refused to resume negotiations as to the precise location of the border fixed in a general way by the Vienna award of November 2, until she had received "material and moral" satisfaction for lives lost and property damaged by the Czecho-Slovak bombardment of Munkacs last Friday.

[Prague dispatches said Czecho-Slovakia had rejected the Hungarian demand for compensation and said the incident started with fire from the Hungarian side. They added that Czecho-Slovaks fired back only to prevent an invasion of their territory.]

A Hungarian foreign office official was quoted as saying, "in view of the repeated attacks and the fact that regular Czech troops participated, it must be assumed that the incidents were a deliberate feature of Czech policy. Should there be another armed assault, the invasion will not only be repulsed by Hungarian troops, but the Hungarian troops will pursue across the demarcation line into Czecho-Slovak territory."

Believed to Have Told Congress That Hitler Could Win European Conflict

War between the democratic and fascist powers of Europe will break out in "early spring" over the Tunisian question, the American Ambassadors to Great Britain and France reportedly informed an extraordinary joint and executive meeting of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees yesterday.

Joseph P. Kennedy, envoy to Britain, and William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, are said to have indicated that the two totalitarian states could defeat the two democracies at the present time, and that the prospect for three or four months hence is not much brighter.

6,500 German Planes

The joint committee was told that the Nazis now possess 6,500 first-class planes, with two or three thousand older units in reserve, The Post was informed last night. The ambassadors are reported to have added that German productive capacity was as high as 1,200 planes per month—or 40 per day. It is understood some of the data Kennedy presented was furnished by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who was reported to have influenced Britain's action in September through his frightening accounts of German aerial strength.

To offset the tremendous armada the Germans might have sent over Paris three and a half months ago, the British had merely 120 planes to spare for the French and Czechs, Kennedy is said to have told the committee.

Germany Leads in Planes

So inadequate is the air equipment of Britain and France that, after a few months' warfare, they would not be able to send up a single plane, the Ambassadors are said to have reported.

With Kennedy leading the gloom parade, the two envoys agreed that Germany is already so far in the lead in the air armaments race that neither Britain nor France can hope to catch up, it was said.

One anti-New Dealer was so "impressed" that he stated afterward, "I formerly thought Great Britain and France sold out at Munich, but now I feel that the sell-out may have been absolutely necessary." He added, however, that he thought the testimony "may have been a build-up for the Administration's arms program."

Arms Program Tomorrow

Details of that program will be known tomorrow, when President Roosevelt sends his special message on rearmament to Congress. At his press conference yesterday, the President said he had not yet written the message.

He added the two Ambassadors appeared before the joint committee because members of Congress invited them. On Capitol Hill, however, at least one Republican Senator said he understood the President was responsible for the unusual procedure.

Kennedy and Bullitt apparently did not touch on American defense

President Weighs Caribbean Cruise To Witness Fleet

Although he emphasized yesterday that he had made no plans, President Roosevelt hopes to be able to get away about February 18 for a cruise in the Caribbean.

The trip would permit the President to witness the fleet maneuvers between Cuba and the South American coast next month.

If the President is able to make the trip, he will probably leave Charleston, S. C., February 19 or 20.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

MAIN ST. IN THE CAPITAL

Just before the new session of Congress began a Washington writer advised new Senators and Congressmen and their wives to hire an expert social secretary before they plunge into the whirlpool of Washington society.

Mrs. Garner . . . ranks 'em

Excellent advice; it would be helpful also to lease a large estate in nearby Virginia or Maryland, hire several servants, rent a large town house and charter a yacht.

* * * *

But actually there are not more than 30 of the 531 members of Congress who have both the cash and the inclination to run the Washington social gantlet on a big scale. Another 100 may have the appetite for it but are without (alas) the cash. They can't be highfalutin' in the Capital on $10,000 a year. It takes at least $30,000.

* * * *

The rest are content to be welcome at enough functions (usually in the afternoon) to satisfy their curiosity, as members of Congress definitely are welcome. They enjoy an occasional glimpse of the inside of a legation or an embassy or a Cabinet officer's house and, once or twice a year, the White House.

All they need to do is spend a few afternoons driving around leaving their cards. Invitations follow more or less automatically. Any second-term member's wife can tell 'em.

"—they need few signals"

A Congressman and wife who can trust themselves to hand their wraps to a servant, shake hands with their hosts and grab enough refreshments to spoil their dinner will get along tolerably well. The social emergencies which might require expert wigwags from a professional social adviser are rare, even in this somewhat more intricate scene.

* * * *

For a political career and a social career are two different and separate things. A society campaign costs more than a political campaign, and even if you're elected you don't get any extra $10,000 a year.

Socially, a Congressman and his wife are involved with colleagues and visiting constituents, and not with the glamour people, and they don't suffer any heartbreak.

* * * *

For better or for worse, there are physical limits to the number of dinners the bigshots can attend, the number of people they can entertain, the number of people their dining rooms will hold.

Even a big embassy can easily be overcrowded. Few living rooms in Washington can hold more than 30 people comfortably; few dining rooms seat that many.

* * * *

And the social big shots, like the Congressmen, have their own lives to lead. They know a lot of people who don't amount to much but whose company they enjoy, just as Congressmen do.

The Capital matron wasn't being haughty when she wrote to an insistent social climber "I do not care at this time to extend the circle of my acquaintances." She was just tired.

"—often Main Street triumphs"

Often enough Main Street can lord it over Park Avenue in the Capital. A million votes make you temporarily more important here than $1,000,000.. Should they happen to be in the same gathering, more people will be making a fuss about Mrs. Jack Garner, of Uvalde, than about Mrs. Jock Whitney, of Long Island. It is refreshing to see modest Averill Harriman, the multi-millionaire, in the Capitol elevator clutching a ticket which entitles him to a seat in the House gallery.

* * * *

The wife of a homespun statesman who has been elected often enough or appointed high enough enjoys plenty of triumphs. She is kowtowed to sufficiently by young bluebloods and their wives who are having an aristocratic fling at public service. They'll hand her dishes of chicken salad and bring her a chair . . . Under the Constitution our civil authorities still outrank the military and socialites.

* * * *

But mostly the Senators and Congressmen entertain each other and their constituents. That takes most of their time and energy and what they can spare from the $10,000 a year. They need no expert guidance to the correct paper napkin . . . To most of them the monthly parties of their State society means more than dinner at the embassy. And they can always phone the State Department for advice.

G. O. P. Chiefs Urge Coalition On Relief Cut

McNary, Martin Offer To Aid Democrats in Stamping Out Politics

House and Senate Republican leaders yesterday joined in a radio attack on the President's relief and spending program and offered to co-operate with Democrats in scaling down expenditures and stamping out "politics in relief."

Senate Minority Leader McNary said Republicans in Congress "will join hands with any group to drive the political racketeer and spoilsman out of the administration of relief."

"We likewise are ready to join hands with any group to bring about a curtailment of reckless Federal spending and take the first steps toward preservation of national solvency by bringing the Federal budget into balance," he said.

Martin Attacks Scandal

Following McNary in the broadcast, Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, floor leader of the 169-member House minority, declared "the Republican side proposes to co-operate wholeheartedly with the leaders of the majority" in any effort "to cut down the President's spendthrift estimates." Martin demanded an end to "this relief scandal."

McNary declared the latest requests for emergency relief spending would not be necessary "were it not for the diversion of relief funds from the high purpose for which they were intended to political ends in the last campaign."

He charged that men whose actions have been "repudiated by the voters have been rewarded with places at the Cabinet table."

Martin Names Hopkins

Although McNary did not refer by name to any of the President's nominees, Martin called attention to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee investigation of relief "as administered under Harry L. Hopkins" and the committee's report.

"Within these pages," said Martin, "is set forth one of the most shocking and disgraceful public scandals in all American history—for which Mr. Hopkins promptly was promoted to the President's Cabinet as Secretary of Commerce."

Martin asked national support "for the proposition that relief should be administered by local bodies" and for expenditures of "every relief dollar under a definite and exact formula laid down by Congress." He said the foremost problem is 10,000,000 unemployed, which he said can be put back to work "by encouraging private enterprise."

Jackson Memorial Sponsor Urges Something Useful

If the sponsor has his way, the memorial which he hopes to have erected in Washington to Andrew Jackson will not be so much gingerbread but something utilitarian, like an auditorium or stadium.

That's what Representative Walter Chandler said yesterday, even if he does come from one of the leading marble-producing States—Tennessee.

"I'm not going to state what my preference is, that is, just what form I think the memorial should take, because that should be left to the nine-man commission that will be named if my bill goes through," said the legislator from Memphis. "But I do hope it will be something that will serve a useful purpose."

Mr. Chandler, who was born in Jackson, Tenn., has been a worshiper of "Old Hickory" since childhood. Last year he was all set to introduce his memorial bill when the storm broke over the Jefferson monument at the Tidal Basin.

"I thought I'd better lay low for a while," he explained yesterday.

President Suggests Franklin Sayings As U. S. Primer

A newspaper correspondent who asked President Roosevelt at his press conference today to suggest an "American primer," was referred to a rare old book published in the eighteenth century containing the sayings of Benjamin Franklin.

"I have a Russian primer and a Nazi primer," a woman correspondent told him she objected to his suggestion, saying, "That's a little out of date, isn't it?"

The President replied that to the contrary it was very modern and included everything, even social relations.

"If I could get them to spend half-an-hour a day walking, I'd cut the death rate in two," he said.

Nine holes of golf would do the trick just as well, Dr. Calver added, but not 18 holes. That would be too much for men who are middle-aged or older and who aren't used to such exercise.

Vice President Garner yesterday forgot a luncheon engagement with Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

He was among those invited to lunch with Kennedy in the Senate secretary's office. The other guests waited a while and called Garner.

Garner said he had already eaten but he went to the luncheon and joined in the conversation.

Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, was elected a member of the democratic steering committee of the House yesterday to represent Virginia, North Carolina and Maryland. He succeeds Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), Maryland.

The steering committee is composed of 18 members elected by geographical groups. Membership rotates among the States forming each unit.

Representative Smith also holds third ranking position on the House Rules Committee, which shapes the House legislative program.

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, proposed in a House speech that general elections in Presidential years be held in October, instead of November, to afford more time for investigation of possible election frauds.

House Sub-Committee Cuts Relief Request $150,000,000

Relief

tions when the bill reaches the House floor tomorrow.

"We will propose that only sufficient funds to carry WPA along until April 7 be provided at this time," Taber said. "That will give Congress some opportunity to work out a sound and intelligent policy for administering relief the remainder of the year."

Ten Hours of Debate

Taber declared House Republicans will make out a case of "political racketeering" against WPA, with evidence uncovered by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee and added evidence he said had been found in the report of the Dies Committee on un-American activities.

To avoid necessity of a special rule giving the funds bill right-of-way, leaders may ask unanimous House consent to consider the bill, with 10 hours of general debate evenly divided between majority and minority speakers. Republicans have indicated they will not object, provided no greater limitation is placed on debate.

The $725,000,000 provided in the relief bill approved by the subcommittee represented a reduction of approximately 17 per cent in the original amout asked by the President.

Same Percentage Next Year

Some Democratic sentiment was developing for applying the same percentage cut to the 1940 budget provision for $1,750,000,000 to finance WPA, the National Youth Administration and the Farm Security Administration for the next fiscal year. If the same gauge is applied to the regular relief appropriation, it would mean a further cut of $297,500,000 under the President's relief estimates for 1940.

While the deficiency sum was approved under substantially the same limitations as the last relief act, a flat restriction was placed on use of any of the money to pay salaries of WPA administrative workers covered into the civil service.

Under the President's executive order of last June 24, staff employes of the WPA, along with Government workers in other emergency agencies, would receive civil service status beginning in February. Democratic members said only they were opposed to granting WPA the permanent status civil service coverage implies.

No Discretion Allowed

The sub-committee's bill says no part of the appropriation shall "be available for compensation of the incumbent of any position placed in the competitive classified civil service of the United States after January 10, 1939."

Attached to the bill was the so-called Woodrum amendment requiring that sums appropriated "shall be so apportioned by the Works Progress Administration so as to cover the entire period from the date of approval of this act until June 30, 1939." The last relief bill gave the President discretion to use all of the money a month in advance of the Congressional deadline. The sub-committee bill allows no such discretion.

The former act's $60,000,000 limitation on the amount that may be allocated to other agencies was raised in the new bill to $83,000,000.

Otherwise, all of the restrictions in the 1938 appropriation are extended to the new measure, the purpose of which is declared to be "to continue to provide work relief on useful public projects, and relief, as authorized in the emergency relief appropriation act of 1938."

G. O. P. Rallies for Slash

House Republicans, understood to be seeking a temporary appropriation of only $300,000,000 to tide WPA through April 7, may rally minority support behind their drive at a House Republican conference tentatively proposed for tomorrow night. An earlier conference of high ranking House Republicans is slated for today.

Seven Democrats and four Republicans at on the sub-committee which ordered the $150,000,000 slash.

A Pennsylvania delegation from the Workers Alliance, left-wing relief worker organization, meantime gathered in front of the House Office Building, demanding a $1,050,000,000 appropriation for relief. A smaller delegation later visited WPA headquarters carrying "Congress Must Not Cut Relief" signs.

Henry Rhine, organizer for the United Federal Workers of America, a C. I. O. group, announced a "Nation-wide campaign" to oppose the cut and to win support for the $1,000,000,000 appropriation John L. Lewis has declared necessary. Rhine charged no member of Congress opposing extension of civil service to WPA can "be sincere in his desire to eliminate partisan politics from the WPA."

Moulton Urges Study of Rail 'Postalization'

Brookings Institution Chief 'Interested,' He Writes to Wheeler

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, said yesterday the Hastings plan for "postalization" of passenger transportation "is worthy of the most careful study."

John A. Hastings, former New York State Senator, sponsor of the plan, made public a letter Dr. Moulton wrote to Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, who had asked Moulton's views on feasibility of the proposal.

New York to Chicago, $1

The plan calls for modelling passenger charges after the postal system. Fares would be based on zones, instead of mileage. Between New York and Chicago, extremes of one zone, fares woul drange from $1 to $18, depending upon which of five classes of service the passenger took. Fares from New York to San Francisco would range upward from $5.

President Roosevelt meanwhile told a press conference he would confer again next week with Senator Wheeler on railroad legislation.

The Chief Executive said he did not know yet whether he would send a special message to Congress on that subject.

Moulton Urges Study

Moulton's letter said:

"This is a problem in which I first became interested in 1906, and naturally when Mr. Hastings first discussed it with me a year or so ago I was prepared to give it sympathetic consideration.

"It falls so closely in line with the general conclusions which we have reached in some of our studies with reference to the vital significance of low prices in order to realize the full advantages of mass production that I am impressed with its soundness in principle.

"In relation to passenger transportation I think such a plan might prove of very great significance. In any case, it is worthy of the most careful study."

Jackson Fete Field Day for Job Seekers

Sponsors of candidates for Federal jobs were busy at the Jackson Day dinner Saturday night, President Roosevelt indicated at his press conference yesterday.

Asked whether he would send to the Senate the renomination of Donald Wakefield Smith as a member of the National Labor Relations Board, he said he had given no thought to nominations since Saturday night, and added that he timed his statement from Saturday because he had received about 18 recommendations on nominations at the banquet.

The Gallup Poll

Public Backs Roosevelt in Attack On Dictators, Surveys Show

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 10.—Recent statements in the German press have declared that President Roosevelt's attacks on dictatorships and the totalitarian governments do not represent the sentiments of a majority of the American people.

GALLUP

In the last year the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted surveys of public sentiment on many aspects of the dictatorship issue, and has found that the great majority of American voters see eye to eye with the Administration.

The most recent studies found widespread resentment of the Nazi treatment of Jews and Catholics in the Reich and showed that American disapproval of Nazi policies has reached a point where 81 per cent of voters favor a boycott of German-made goods.

The public's attitude toward Germany was comparatively neutral, Institute studies found, up to the time of Hitler's seizure of Austria early in 1938. Prior to that event a large majority of voters (62 per cent) said they thought America would be able to stay out of a European war. But after the Austrian coup, nearly half of the voters—46 per cent—said they thought the United States would have to fight Germany again within their lifetime.

The unpopularity of Germany was further increased by the Czechoslovakian crisis of last summer which led to the Munich agreement. Tests taken shortly after the parley found a sharp public reaction to the "deal" which the democratic powers had made with the dictators at Munich. Other studies found a great distrust by the American public of Hitler's promises, for 92 per cent of voters said they did not believe the Fuehrer's statement that he has "no more territorial ambitions in Europe."

The Institute has on several occasions asked voters to name their favorite foreign country. In the most recent of these studies only 4 per cent mentioned Germany, and only 3 per cent named Italy in contrast to 48 per cent naming England—another evidence of the unpopularity of the dictatorship nations. Russia and Japan likewise received a low vote—2 per cent or less.

American public opinion is particularly resentful of the war-like activities of the dictator powers. When the Institute asked voters recently what nation or nations they think will be responsible for starting another world war if such a war comes, they named Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia in that order.

Frankfurter Popular Choice of Lawyers

Prof. Felix Frankfurter, nominated by President Roosevelt to the Supreme Court, has for nearly two years been the leading choice of American lawyers for appointment to the court, according to surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

In February, 1937, the Institute polled a cross-section of the 175,000 members of the legal profession asking if there was anyone they would like to see appointed to the court. Prof. Frankfurter received the largest number of mentions.

Last autumn, shortly after the death of Justice Cardozo, the survey was repeated. Again Prof. Frankfurter was the top choice, receiving five times as many mentions as any other candidate.

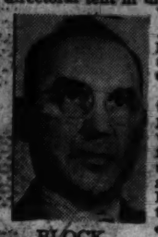
3d Term Clubs Open National Headquarters

D. S. Block, Director, Admits No Assurance Roosevelt Will Run

Scorning precedent and party politics, the National Association of Roosevelt for 1940 Clubs pitched its directoral tent in the shadow of the White House yesterday and prepared to open a Nation-wide campaign.



BLOCK

"We expect the American people as a whole to come forward and aid us in this work," said David S. Block, Washington attorney and director of the association's headquarters. "We represent the people; not Mr. Roosevelt, or either political party. Of course we have no assurance Mr. Roosevelt contemplates accepting the nomination. The White House is familiar with our work but no statement has been made to us expressing either approval or disapproval."

Group Is Nonpartisan

The association is claimed to be nonpartisan. Its president, William H. Izard, of Camden, N. J., is a former Republican member of the New Jersey Legislature.

Its founder and secretary, Samuel W. Silverman, of Jersey City, is a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and has taken part in every Democratic National Convention since nomination of Woodrow Wilson.

Silverman was associated with Roosevelt when the latter was Governor of New York and was chairman of the New Jersey State Democratic Committee in Roosevelt's 1932 campaign.

8,000 Members Claimed

The association claims to be financed entirely by voluntary contributions and to have no paid executives. It was founded last June by Silverman and Thomas J. Ogilvie, Atlantic City attorney and publisher. Sixteen branches have been opened in various parts of the country and a nucleus of some 8,000 members has been formed, Block says.

With the opening of the national headquarters yesterday, after a two-day "strategy" conference at Atlantic City last week, an intensive Nation-wide campaign for enrollment has begun. Local clubs are planned to be formed all over the country and leaders will visit every State.

Dodge's 11-Day Bride Gets Big Slice of Estate

Ex-Phone Girl Receives From $400,000 to $8,000,000 From Court

By the Associated Press.

Pontiac, Mich., Jan. 10.—Mrs. Annie Laurine Dodge, former $15-a-week telephone operator at Gore Bay, Ont., who was the wife of Daniel G. Dodge for 11 days, won a widow's share of a motor fortune today.

Estimates of the amount the young widow eventually will receive ranged from $400,000 to $8,000,000, since a settlement approved today in Oakland County Probate Court did not fix the disputed value of the estate. State and Federal taxes would sharply reduce these figures.

Mrs. Dodge's attorney, Paul Oren, of Detroit, said the settlement made the 21-year-old widow eligible to receive $8,000,000, less taxes. He said he expected she would receive $3,000,000 this year under the terms of the settlement which gives one-fourth of the immediate estate to the widow and three-fourths to Mrs. Mathilda R. Wilson, Dodge's mother.

The remaining $5,000,000, Oren said, would be payable to Mrs. Dodge from a $40,000,000 trust fund established by the late John F. Dodge, motor magnate, for his four children.

Counsel for Mrs. Wilson said Mrs. Dodge was certain of receiving only one-fourth of $1,600,000 which Daniel Dodge possessed outright at his death, although, she may be entitled to a larger share in the future.

Mrs. Dodge, daughter of a Manitoulin Island, Ontario, tug boat captain, met young Dodge two years ago. They were married last August 2. On August 13, Dodge was injured by a dynamite explosion at his summer lodge on Manitoulon Island where they were spending their honeymoon. He fell from a boat and drowned while he was being taken to the mainland for treatment.

Miss (Clerical Foreman) Shouse Paces WPA Bookbinders

Project Reconditions Texts for Schools; Already Has Finished 2,000 and Expects To Do 75,000 Before It Is Ended

Worn textbooks of the District public schools soon will be a thing of the past, if Miss Elizabeth Shouse and her WPA Brightwood School bookbinding project continue to operate at their present pace.

All drawn from relief rolls, the staff, 35 in number, has reconditioned more than 2,000 school books and expects to handle more than 75,000 before the project is completed.

A surprising change in the outlook, appearance and general bearing of her charges is noted after they start to work, Miss Shouse said.

Skilled workers receive $75 for a 90-hour month, and unskilled help is paid $42 for a 140-hour month.

Daughter of Jouett Shouse, Miss Shouse has the title of "clerical foreman." She laughingly admitted, "I started as supervisor and my present title may be a demotion, but I still do the same job and am extremely interested in the work."

One amusing incident occured in the first day of the project. An illiterate worker was given a job repairing torn pages of the books. He performed a neat and workmanlike job but upon completion, it was discovered that several pages had been pasted in upside down and others were inserted in the wrong places.

"Oh, well," sighed Miss Shouse, "those things will happen, but all the employes here now can read so that's one thing I won't have to worry about any more.

Autos Rerouted Without Trouble At Key Bridge

Park police said last night the sudden rerouting of traffic at the Rosslyn end of Key Bridge "worked better than we anticipated," and predicted motorists would not be inconvenienced during several weeks of construction at the span.

Clark, Holman Put on Senate D.C. Committee

Minority Gains Seat Over Last Session; House Vacancies Open

Two new members were added to the Senate District Committee yesterday as House Democrats and Republicans continued deliberations on committee assignments.

Appointment of Senators D. Worth Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, and Rufus C. Holman (Republican), of Oregon, completed the District Committee roster, giving the majority 11 and the minority 4 places, as compared with a last session ratio of 12 to 3.

Clark, a graduate of Notre Dame University and the Harvard Law School, served in the House before being elected to the Senate last fall.

Senator Holman has a keen interest in municipal affairs, he said, because of his service in Portland and the county which encompasses it.

In 1913 he was a member of the Portland charter commission, which changed the form of the city's government.

While the five vacancies on the House District Committee are still open, it was reported on reliable authority that Representative William D. Byran (Democrat), of Maryland, will get one of the places.

Coster-Musica's Three Brothers Plead Guilty

Admit Complicity in $11,000,000 Swindle; Sentence Deferred

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—F. Donald Coster-Musica's three brothers pleaded guilty today to charges linking them with the financial trickery he practiced to defraud the McKesson & Robbins drug firm of an estimated $11,000,000 in the 12 years he was its president.

They were accused in connection with the filing of false financial statements with the New York Stock Exchange and the Securities and Exchange Commission—the charge their brother faced when he committed suicide December 16. The court was told the brothers had promised to co-operate in the Government's investigation.

Meanwhile, testimony was offered before Assistant Attorney General McCall showing the Coster-Musica defalcations totaled $4,203,700 in 1930, and were close to $2,000,000 even in the depression year of 1932. The State charges Coster-Musica was able to steal so much by recording fake disbursements for the purchase of crude drugs.

The "take" in 1927, the year after Coster-Musica became president of McKesson & Robbins, was allegdly $54,500, and by 1938 the nonexistent assets marked up on the books was $20,613,000.

The three who pleaded guilty were George E. Dietrich-Musica, who was assistant treasurer and an assistant vice president in the firm's Bridgeport office; Robert Dietrich-Musica, head of the shipping department at Bridgeport, and George Vernard-Arthur Musica, who was called Canadian agent of the firm. Sentence was deferred until February 6.

The indictment contained four counts, each carrying a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

FSA Broke Pledge On Group Health, Optometrist Says

The Farm Security Administration's group medical plan is criticized in a letter by a North Dakota optometrist received yesterday by that State's Congressmen.

Eden Praises Roosevelt Talk As a 'Tonic'

'Signpost' for Liberty, He Calls It Before U. S. Chamber in London

By Frank R. Kelley
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Jan. 10.—President Roosevelt's recent message to Congress is "a signpost which points the way along which all liberty-loving nations of the world would wish to travel," Anthony Eden, former British foreign secretary, declared today in a speech to the American Chamber of Commerce in London.

Coupling his praise of the President's address with a slashing attack on "state idolatry" and "unscientific, oppressive racialism' of totalitarian countries, Eden warned the democracies it would be "blind folly' to meet the dictatorships' challenge by relying on outworn methods.

Stresses Defense Needs

Advocating readjustment of the rights of the individual to relate them to the needs of society, the foremost of which was defense, Eden asserted:

"If the needs of the state are subordinated or neglected, they may be swept away and the rights of the individual lost."

Eden's speech, his first since his return last month from the United States, was loudly cheered by his immediate audience of 850 American businessmen. It also was heard in the United States by short-wave broadcast.

Radiating charm, Eden began by disclosing that in the volume of correspondence which he received after his speech at the Waldorf Astoria in New York, was an anonymous cable of just three words: "It was lousy."

British Effect "Tonic"

"I could not reply to it," Eden said with a smile, "but I regard it as the expression of true democracy and enlightenment of the public man for the good of his own soul.

"Rumor has it that there are certain countries where such enlightenment is not a spontaneous expression, but one of ministerial care. How much they must miss who cannot receive a telegram like that."

He referred to the President's address on world problems as "a definition which will surely become historic, for the speech was a masterpiece of clarity and candor. . .

"I am sure my British friends and audience will agree with me when I say it is difficult to exaggerate the tonic effect of that speech upon the British people."

Glassy Waters Hamper Start of Navy's Mass Flight to Canal

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

One of the 48 Navy patrol bombers that set out yesterday on the 3,000-mile hop to the Panama Canal zone in a massed flight is shown racing for the takeoff over the glassy waters of San Diego Bay that for a time hampered takeoffs. The planes will join the battle fleet in the 1939 war games

66 Warplanes Roar Away in Record Flights

48 Bombers Leave Coast On Hop to Canal Zone; 18 Ships Head for Cuba

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 10.—In the greatest long distance mass flights in American Naval history, 66 warplanes roared East and South today to join war maneuvers on the Caribbean Sea.

Forty-eight patrol bombers cruised through the night on a 3,000-mile nonstop flight to the Canal Zone, while two groups of amphibians halted in Texas on a flight to Cuba.

The bombers, under Capt. Marc A. Mitscher, left for Panama at 3:12 a. m. (E. S. T.).

They flew down the California coast in a 130-mile-long parade composed of four squadrons of 12 planes each, for a rendezvous over the airplane carrier Saratoga 800 miles south of San Diego. The entire flight was scheduled to take between 20 and 25 hours, including the time necessary to group in formation over the Saratoga.

The 18 other planes took off at 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) under command of Commander Allen I. Price. The utility squadron VJ-1 headed east in two groups along the regular aerial "ferry" lanes.

Japan Denies Arita Threat Against U. S.

Quoted Saying Measures Would Be Used If Sanctions Applied

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Jan. 11.—The Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi printed what it said was an interview with Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita today indicating Japan was ready to take strong measures against the United States and Great Britain in retaliation for any economic pressure upon her, but the foreign office promptly denied such an interview had been given.

The newspaper quoted Arita as declaring Japan would prepare "retaliatory measures against the mainlands and dependencies of the United States and Britain" if they "should resort to serious economic pressure against Japan."

The foreign office spokesman, however, said "we do not have information of any such interview."

"The story," he said, "is supposed to reflect the views of various officials of the foreign office, but I believe it is Nichi Nichi's guess."

Sentiment against the United States and England has been gathering in Japan for some time. Japan regards the China war as a "holy crusade" to end foreign domination in China, both politically and economically and not as an aggressive war on her part.

A loan of $25,000,000 recently granted China by the United States Export-Import Bank aroused intense indignation in Government circles.

Japanese strategists long have expressed doubt that in case of war the British and American fleets could act jointly. Distances are too great, they say, particularly for the British grand fleet.

Japan would quickly attack and, they say, probably take the Philippines, Guam, Hongkong and Singapore, cut the trade routes and then retire to the defensive to await attack in waters highly favorable to Japan.

U. S. Representative to See Dr. Schacht Today On German Plan to Profit by Refugees

By Ralph W. Barnes
Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Jan. 10.—The so-called "Schacht plan," under which the emigration of the Jews of Germany would be used as a lever to stimulate German exports and provide the Reich with much-needed foreign currency, will be the subject of conversations tomorrow between George Rublee, director of the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee, and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank.

Accompanied by Robert Pell and Joseph Cotton, who will assist him in the conversations, Rublee arrived here this morning from Paris.

Under the "Schacht plan," it was revealed today, the Reich, at no real cost to itself, would get rid of the bulk of the 600,000 German and stateless Jews (Schacht's figures) in this country.

Moreover, the Reich would be placed in a position to "dump" goods on the international market, and to receive in return a large sum of foreign currency. The partial boycott on German goods would be broken, and through Schacht's idea that Jews in other countries should finance the project, the Jews would be shouldered with the onus of breaking it.

Wage earners, estimated at 150,000, would be sent from Germany at a rate to be fixed by negotiation. Their dependents would follow when the breadwinners had established themselves abroad. But unless some means is provided, outside the Schacht plan, for the old and feeble, they would remain in the Riech under a guaranty that Germany would provide for them.

Jews abroad would raise a loan on the security of Jewish wealth in Germany. Schacht is understood to have proposed between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000, based theoretically on the "transferable" wealth of the Jews here, after payment of "taxes" and the so-called billion-mark levy.

Settlement of Jews abroad would be financed through the loan and, contrary to reports abroad, the proceeds could not come directly into Germany. The Reich would be enabled to increase her exports above the figures for "current trade" averages, to be fixed by negotiation. A share of the proceeds from the sale of increased quantities of goods would be used for payment of interest and amortization of the loan.

Negotiations Break Down

Berlin, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Negotiations on the status of 25,000 Polish Jews living in the Reich tonight broke down on the question of Berlin's refusal to permit the Polish Jews, whose mass deportation was ordered three months ago, to carry more than 25 per cent of their wealth across the frontier.

It was uncertain whether negotiations would be resumed.

$2,439,500,000 Is '38 Increase In Arms Spending

Geneva, Jan. 10 (AP).—The League of Nations armaments year book in an annual estimate published today said the world spent approximately $2,439,500,000 more for armaments in 1938 than it did in 1937.

The yearbook said the world's military expenditures for 1938 amounted to $16,083,500,000, as compared with 1937 expenditures of $13,544,000,000.

It said the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, Japan, Italy and the Soviet Union spent 78.7 per cent of the total.

In 1929, the same seven countries accounted for only 66.7 per cent of the world total, or 2,800,000,000 gold dollars ($4,740,400,000) out of 4,200,0000,000 gold dollars ($7,110,800,000).

From 1929 through 1938 these seven great powers spent 41,000,000,000 gold dollars ($60,413,000,000), an average of 5,800,000,000 gold dollars ($8,810,400,000) for each of the past ten years.

The figures, which are approximate in some countries because no official statistics are available, represent a breakdown of direct army, naval and air force expenses for the various countries given in national currencies, making a comparison impossible. The year book gives no individual figures for Germany.

Expenditures for 1938 for the great powers, excluding Germany, for which no individual figures are given, were:

Russian, 17,481,000,000 rubles (nominally $3,496,200,000); Britain, £261,600,0000 ($1,211,208,000); United States, $1,009,700,000; Japan, 1,411,200,000 yen ($381,024,000); Italy, 3,952,900,0000 lire ($313,122,504), and France, 9,522,500,000 francs ($247,385,0000).

Estimated for 1939 expenditures for countries available include:

Russia, 27,044,0000,000 rubles (nominally $5,408,800,000); Britain, £326,600,000 ($1,512,158,000); Japan, 1,246,200,000 yen ($336,636,000); Italy, 6,363,400,000 lire ($334,714,840), and France, 11,064,300,000 francs ($287,971,800).

men, was described as eager to make a campaign and figuratively "daring" the Czecho-Slovaks to "start something."

The Hungarian - Czecho - Slovak mixed commission appointed to investigate the Munkacs incident continued its work, but reported vaguely that "progress is being made."

(Hungarian revisionists who want Hungary's post-war boundaries revised outward have charged that the Munkacs incident was German-inspired. Germany has opposed Hungarian ambitions to acquire Carpatho-Ukraine. She has been reported in many quarters to be planning a spring campaign of her own in the province to bring it, together with Ukrainians in Poland, Rumania and Soviet Russia, into a united Ukrainian state.)

Castle Denounces 'Good Neighbor' Policy as 'Mushy'

Boston, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Former Undersecretary of State William R. Castle tonight denounced the Roosevelt "'good neighbor" policy as "mushy," and said it encouraged such Latin-American nations as Mexico and Bolivia to confiscate the property of Americans without fear of reprisal.

He also deplored attacks by Administration spokesmen on the dictator nations, and warned that they not only do not insure peace, but create "an atmosphere which is conducive to explosions that may well result in war."

"The Department of State, under the direct guidance of the President," is so definitely ignoring American rights in its fanatical support of a misunderstood slogan—the good neighbor policy—that it is making this country more than a little ridiculous in the eyes of those same neighbors, who are not made to understand that they also have an obligation to society."

Spruille Braden Named as Envoy To Colombia

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Spruille Braden, of New York, to be Ambassador to Colombia. Braden now is Minister to Colombia.

The President also named Frank P. Corrigan, of Ohio, to be the first Ambassador to Venezuela. Corrigan now is Minister to Panama.

Recess appointments sent to the Senate were:

Robert F. Freer, of Ohio, for a seven-year term on the Federal Trade Commission; M. Roland Reed, of Pennsylvania, for a five-year term on the Railroad Retirement Board; Norman Case, of Rhode Island, for a seven-year term on the Federal Communications Commission; Ambrose O'Connell, of New York, to be Second Assistant Postmaster General.

THE THRIFT-CARRIERS CHEVROLET A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE FOR THE NATION

Franco Nears Sea, Perils Big Loyalist Army

Catalonian Forces 12 Miles From Coast Near Falset

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Jan. 10.—Gen. Franco appeared tonight to be hammering a wedge of men and guns toward the Mediterranean to split off a new chunk of Catalonia.

The insurgent right wing was reported to have reached a point 12 miles from the sea, near Falset.

A government army between Tarragona and Tortosa was threatened with entrapment. To escape, the government forces were reported falling back toward Tarragona, seaport 50 miles southwest of Barcelona.

Seek Thrust to Sea

An insurgent spearhead to the coast would close the only overland escape, leaving the defenders bounded on the other sides by the Mediterranean and the curve of the Ebro River dominated by insurgent guns.

The attackers appeared maneuvering for a direct thrust to the sea above Tortosa, southernmost tip of the government's salient, and then a wheeling to the northeast in the direction of Tarragona.

To Threaten Barcelona

Immediate objective was to take Falset, which would give the insurgents a foothold on the main inland road eastward to Reus and Tarragona. Then the insurgents would be expected to push on southeastward to the sea.

With the occupation of the segment of Catalonia thus cut off the insurgents would have widened the gap between the two parts of government Spain, bringing an even graver threat to Barcelona.

Insurgent reports said the government's counter-offensive in southwestern Spain was halted by reinforcements rushed by Gen. Queipo de Llamo to defend Seville lines communicating with northern insurgent Spain.

Government dispatches, however, reported Gen. Jose Miaja's troops were consolidating conquered positions.

Barcelona communiques reported the government armies were about 65 miles from the Portuguese frontier, with four columns driving westward fanwise into Badajoz Province.

Insurgent communiques denied government assertions large foreign forces were fighting in their Catalonian offensive. An insurgent source in Baragoza, however, told a representative of Havas (French) News Agency that 16,000 legionnaires among a total of 352,000 men were operating in the Catalonian sector.

War in Spring Reported Two Envoys' Forecast to Congress needs. "They left it up to us to draw our own conclusions," said a committee member. However, the inference immediately drawn from the Ambassadors' statements was that America's airplane production capacity should be augmented.

Ukraine a Danger Spot

The envoys were quoted as stating that the Ukraine, as well as Tuis, is a danger spot, and as holding that neither Hitler's drive to the East, nor Mussolini's ambitions in the Mediterranean have been satisfied.

France was described as having reached the limit of patience with the Chamberlain appeasement policy, it was stated. The Ambassadors—who were reported in agreement throughout the discussion—are said to have told the committee that the British government would go to even greater lengths to mollify dictatorial appetites, but that France would fight rather than yield again.

Although an attempt to seize or to start an insurrection in the Ukraine would involve Hitler in a war with the Soviet Union, it was represented that the ambassadors doubted that a Russo-German conflict would necessarily result in a general European war.

But any effort by Mussolini to grasp control of Tunis from the French would inevitably involve the West, they are said to have held. It was from Mussolini, encouraged by Hitler's successes, that western Europe had most to fear.

(According to the United Press, Kennedy reportedly said that Great Britain's policy of appeasement is so deep rooted that she would permit Hitler to build a German airbase in Canada rather than revert to war. The intransigence of France was explained on the grounds that the French know the British would have to join them in case of war, and expect that Russia also would align herself on the anti-Fascist side.)

One committee member said Kennedy and Bullitt evidently thought that postponements of an inevitable crisis would only intensify it.

May Ask Air Fund

It was reported that the President might ask a sum up to $50,000,000 be made available for immediate airplane construction. At the same time, some members of Congress warned that overconstruction of airplanes would be folly, because of rapid obselescence, and decried the oft-repeated figure of 10,000 new planes.

Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, said he favors adding 5,000 planes to the 2,320 already authorized, and that he also intends to introduce a bill for the construction of super-highways along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts to facilitate military movements. In addition, May said, he will propose military training for 300,000 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps. President Roosevelt, however, emphatically rejected the suggestion at his press conference, saying he wanted the CCC retained as a permanent agency in its present form.

The President conferred on his defense message yesterday with Secretary of War Harry Woodring, Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison.

Reynolds Sees No War

The House and Senate committees sought to keep secret all details of the Ambassadors' reports. At the conclusion of the two-hour session, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, an ardent isolationist, is said to have stated that he heard nothing from Kennedy and Bullitt he did not already know; also that he intended to make a Senate speech tomorrow based on his own personal knowledge of the foreign situation. Administration leaders are said to have asked him not to make the speech.

Reynolds flatly refused to give reporters any inkling of what had transpired at the committee meeting. He did say, though, that he is convinced there will be no war in Europe. "Who's going to fight?" he asked, asserting that "France is a second-rate nation" and Great Britain is "under the will and control of Mussolini and Hitler."

Against Interference

While expressing sympathy with the persecuted in Germany, Spain, Abyssinia, China and Russia, Reynolds vehemently said: "I don't want my Government to get into a war with any country on "account of the minorities of any country."

Reynolds asserted that "at Lima we issued notice to the world that this is the empire of the Western Hemisphere and we won't permit encroachments—and in the same breath we tell the Japanese they can't create an empire of the Orient."

Two other opponents of drastic increase in air strength—Senators Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, also declared that the Ambassadors' report had told them nothing they did not previously know.

Confer With Hull

Kennedy, Bullitt and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles conferred with Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday.

The merits of lifting the Spanish arms embargo and other questions will be discussed at a forum of experts which Senator Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, yesterday announced he was instituting.

Senator Connally, Texas Democrat and member of Pittman's committee, criticized the neutrality act, observing that it shackles the President's conduct of foreign policy; but Senator Borah, ranking minority member of the committee, disagreed with Pittman's recent advocacy of economic sanctions against aggressors. He said he would rather have the United States "engaged in shooting soldiers than in starving women and children."

Nanking Official Asks for Peace

Shanghai, Jan. 10 (AP).—Wen Tsung-yao, presidentof the legislative council of the "reformed government of China" at Nanking, appealed today for peace with Japan.

The appeal coincided with a mass air attack on Chungking, provisional Chinese capital nearly 1,400 miles up the Yangtze River, and bitter fighting in the Hangchow sector southwest of Shanghai, in southwestern Shansi Province and west of Hankow.

Wen asked nine unconquered provinces to agree to peace terms. His was the first public peace move by one of the Japanese-dominated, Chinese-manned regimes in occupied territories.

Hull to Deny Premature Cuban Accord

To Tell Senate Group No Pact Was Reached On Trade Treaty Changes

Secretary of State Hull yesterday arranged to appear before the Senate Finance Committee Friday to deny reports implying this country had reached an agreement with Cuba over trade treaty changes before hearings on the proposal were announced here.

The secretary talked by phone with Chairman Harrison, Mississippi, of the committee, following introduction Monday of a resolution by ten senators calling for information on the question. The resolution contended that Cuban officials announced in Havana last November 28 that an oral agreement had been reached with this Government two days before the State Department gave formal notice that a hearing would be held on January 3. The reciprocal trade agreements act requires advance public notice of the products to be considered in negotiations.

Hull told reporters yesterday there was not a semblance of truth in reports implying violation of this requirement.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, resuming his attack on Administration policies, centered his fire on the trade agreements policy. He predicted that Republican gains in 1940 would be sufficient to repeal the program.

Treadway declared that the Administration was "taking from Peter to pay Paul" in the British and Canadian trade agreements, and charged the two agreements opened the door for importations that deprive Americans of work.

"It must be," he added, "that Secretary Hull was more interested in consequences and consideration other than trade advantages for this country. Our citizens may well concern themselves as to whether there were additional commitments made which do not consist of more tariff reductions—secret commitments which may involve this country in entangling foreign alliances.

"There is at least reason for believing that the treaty was greatly desired simply for the psychological effect it would have on certain other countries which I need not mention."

Chamberlain, in Paris, Pledges Aid to France Against Italy

self directly to the French government.

The communique issued after the Anglo-French conversation stated:

"While passing through Paris on their way to Rome, the Prime Minister and Lord Halifax have taken this occasion to confer at the Quai d'Orsay with M. Daladier and Georges Bonnet. This conversation has confirmed fully the general identity of views established previously between the two governments."

Today's conversation between the British and French statesmen serves as a symbolical manifestation of the solidiarity of the entente cordiale between France and Britain on the eve of the Rome meeting and a warning to Mussolini not to count on British support in his campaign against the French colonial empire.

The conversation between Chamberlain and Daladier today established their intention to stand by the principle of the status quo in the Mediterranean which is the fundamental principle of the Anglo-Italian accord of last April.

Two important corollaries derive from this principle: First, Britain will give no countenance to Italy's campaign against the French colonial empire, and second, no belligerent rights will be conferred on Gen. Franco by Britain and France until Mussolini has withdrawn all his legionnaires from Spain.

Daladier made it clear that France regarded the Laval-Mussolini accord of 1935, which the Fascist government has denounced, as still basis of future negotiations with Italy. The French premier stressed that while his government rejected all suggestions of territorial concessions on the part of France to Italy, going beyond those recorded in the 1935 agreement, it was willing to negotiate with the Italian government on the question of facilitating the transportation of passengers and freight on the French-owned Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railroad.

Finally, Daladier rejected the idea of establishing a free port in Djibouti, which he regarded as a derogation of France's sovereignty over that African harbor.

[The British and French statesmen, however, were reported by the Associated Press to have left a way open to prevent Italo-French tension from reaching a deadlock. It was said France would be willing to meet Italy at a conference table with all other countries bordering the inland sea, Yugoslavia, Greece, Spain and Egypt.—Editor's Note.]

One consequence of the wild Italian press campaign for Tunis and Corsica has been an increasing recognition in French circles of the menace to French security that would be created by a Franco victory in Spain.

Annapolis Set For O'Conor Inaugural

Jubilant Democrats Awaited; New Governor Takes Oath at Noon

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10.—A 19-gun salute will be fired over this historic town at noon tomorrow proclaiming that Maryland has a new Governor—Herbert Romulus O'Conor, 43-year-old Democrat elected by a landslide in November.

Annapolis, settled in 1649 and designated the capital in 1694, bears a festive appearance as it awaits arrival of the Governor-elect and an army of Democrats who will celebrate return of their party to State power.

Red, white and blue bunting garlands ancient office buildings, relieved here and there with the gold, black and silver of the State flag. Stores and homes continue to display Christmas red and green.

Leaves Baltimore At 10 a. m.

Governor-elect O'Conor will leave his Baltimore home at 10 a. m., accompanied by Mrs. O'Conor, and four of their five children. Their 2-year-old baby will be left with a nurse.

Thanks to courtesy of the outgoing chief executive, Harry W. Nice, O'Conor will ride to Annapolis in the official Governor's car behind a special escort.

Here, Gov. Nice will be packed and ready to say farewell to the mansion that has been his residence for four years.

24 in Official Party

The largest crowd in long history of Annapolis inaugurals, which goes back to the days of knee breeches and wigs, is expected. Baltimore will send 150 policemen to handle traffic and there will be 45 State troopers.

The official party for the inauguration has 24 members. Besides the two principals, O'Conor and Nice, they are Sumner A. Welles, Undersecretary of State; Postmaster General Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Senators Tydings and Radcliffe; Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Governor from 1911 to 1915; Emerson C. Harrington, Governor from 1915 to 1919; Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the Naval Academy; Maj. Gen. Milton A. Record, State adjutant general.

State Comptroller William S. Gordy and Comptroller-elect J. Millard Tawes; William C. Walsh, attorney general; James A. Young, clerk of the court of appeals; Hooper S. Miles, State treasurer; E. Ray Jones, secretary of state; Howard Bruce, Democratic National Committeeman for Maryland; Clarence W. Miles, chairman of the Democratic campaign committee in the last election; Brig. Gen. H. John Markey, assistant adjutant general; Rabbi William Rosenau, the Rev. James J. Coale and the Very Rev. Mgr. Harry A. Quinn; Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, and Mayor Louis H. Phipps, of Annapolis.

Takes Oath at Noon

Governor-elect O'Conor and member of his party will leave Government House for the Senate chamber at 11:55 a. m., and at noon he will be given the oath of office by Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond.

At that same moment, a National Guard battery set up on the campus of nearby St. John's College will start the 19-gun salute to the new governor.

At 12:30 p. m. Gov. O'Conor will walk to the east portico where he will deliver his inaugural address. At 1:30 p. m. he will review the inaugural parade from the balcony of the Elks Home and, at 2 p. m., he and Mrs. O'Conor will hold a public reception in the Senate chamber.

Brooklyn, Hearing Things, Can't Figure Its Own Noises

Police Incline to Blame Banshee for Strange Sounds None Can Identify; Might as Well Be That as Anything Else

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—The bewildered Borough of Brooklyn was on the alert tonight, its collective cauliflower ear at attention for the wailing, shrieking, roaring, rumbling noise which sounded last night from Prospect Park to the banks of the Gowanus Canal, for all the world as mysterious as a Dodger first baseman's explanation of how he came to be covering leftfield.

Policemen who have come to know Brooklyn as never-neverland, cruised through twisted streets looking for a banshee.

Molasses in January?

They thought it might as well be a banshee as anything else. For a time today they were pretty sure the eerie sound came from a molasses factory. This was a theory to which some Brooklyn residents clung tenaciously tonight, even when advised that there are no molasses factories in Brooklyn.

As one of them put it: "Why ain't they?"

The fact that no Brooklyn resident knows what molasses manufacture sounds like lent weight to the belief because no two persons can agree on what last night's noise sounded like.

Best Brains—If Any!

The banshee theory was orthodox and seemed to be about all that remained for right-thinking citizens to cling to after airports had reported no planes loose, the Weather Bureau had absolved the mild west wind, the powerhouse insisted all was quiet out that way, and the Prospect Park Zoo gave a clean bill of health for the animals.

The best brains of the police department not only were unable to solve the riddle of the noise's nature and origin. They could not even discover its general location. Some said it came from the sky and others said it welled up from the ground.

No one in Brooklyn is downcast. Everything will be back to normal, according to general belief, as soon as the Dodgers start spring training.

Rep. Kennedy To Fight 1-Man District Rule

Terms Plan to Abolish Present Commission A Political Move

Although last year he favored a city manager form of government for the District, Representative Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday stated he would oppose any government reorganization plan which would abolish the three-man Board of Commissioners.

Commenting on reports that the municipal experts now drafting a reorganization report were considering proposing a single administrator in lieu of the Commissioners, Kennedy said:

"I think it would be a mistake to inject a political issue into the movement for District government reform, and that's what Congress would consider any recommendation to abolish the Board of Commissioners."

Executive Officer Needed

Kennedy, who was largely responsible for the Congressional authorization for the present study, said he would favor the appointment of an executive coordinator providing he does not replace the Commissioners.

He also expressed hope that the report will not propose any violent shake-up in personnel.

Would Reduce Gradually

"I think any reduction in the number of District employes should be made over a period of years as vacancies occur from natural causes," he explained. "That's what we did when we reorganized the Baltimore government."

Okla. Dam Held Aiming at Union's 'Destruction'

Oklahoma City, Jan. 10 (AP).—Newly installed Democratic Gov. Phillips of Oklahoma attacked the Federal Government's $36,000,000 Red River Dam project today as "aiming at the destruction of the Union."

Addressing a joint session of the Legislature, Phillips said the project, planned near Denison, Tex., would inundate rich southern Oklahoma farm lands, "impoverish whole counties," and change the territorial boundaries of the State. He asked a hearing before United States funds were appropriated.

Sharecroppers Flee Shacks 2d Time in 2 Years

Mass Demonstration Against Conditions in Missouri; Cite Evictions

By the Associated Press.

New Madrid, Mo., Jan. 10.—Hundreds of sharecropper families who fled or were rescued from their shanties during the great flood two years ago, were homeless again tonight under different but similarly pitiful circumstances.

They bundled up their few possessions and trekked from their rickety homes to the highways in a mass demonstration against working conditions in the southeast Missouri bootheel country.

Claiming they were forced from their homes by eviction notices and by other causes beyond their control, the mass migration followed an appeal by Owen H. Whitfield, colored Baptist minister.

Crying Babies Add to Picture

They huddled around camp fires or makeshift stoves along roads, sharing the contents of huge steaming kettles.

The number of camps still was growing at nightfall as newcomers, mostly colored, straggled in on foot or in dilapidated vehicles.

Men, feeble with age, one woman so ill she had to be carried to the highway on a cot, and babies crying from fright and hunger added to the distressing picture.

Stark tragedy was not the whole picture, however, for at suppertime some camps guitars furnished an accompaniment for singing.

No violence or disorder was reported.

At Jefferson City, George L. Haworth, social security administrator, said no direct relief funds were available, but he said food supplies from the State's surplus commodity stores would be sent to them. Gov. Stark asked Haworth to co-operate with the Red Cross in giving aid.

Study of Monopolies To Be Resumed Monday

The Temporary National Economic Committee will resume study of monopolies Monday, when Conway P. Coe, Commissioner of Patents of the Department of Commerce, will present a paper outlining results of patent licensing under present procedure.

Martin Calls For Showdown In Union Fight

UAW President Demands Special Convention to Terminate Factional War

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Jan. 10.—Homer Martin, charging that a "union within a union" had served the interests of the Communist Party, called for a showdown tonight with his foes in the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers.

He asked the U. A. W. International executive board, controlled by men who have threatened to oust him from the presidency, to call a special convention by March 1 "to terminate once and for all the factional war in the union."

Martin, who long has been at odds with leaders of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, demanded dissolution of a U. A. W.-C. I. O. co-ordinating committee set up to arbitrate factional disputes. He reiterated his demand that the U. A. W be autonomous, "an equal among equals."

The board adjourned late tonight without having taken any action, spokesmen said. The board will meet again tomorrow at 10 a. m. ((Eastern standard time).

Not only Martin's position as president of the union, but also the offices held by his opponents in the U. A. W. would be at stake in the special convention.

"If the membership . . . does not want me as president of the union I am prepared to let the membership of the union tell me this," he declared.

Martin told the board that conferences he has held with Ford Motor Co. officials "have been moving in the direction of an understanding," but denied "the allegation that there have been secret meetings between myself and Harry Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor Co."

Martin said that if the board declined to call a special convention he would carry the question to the rank and file for a referendum vote.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

It's a "solid sending week" at the night spots. All of the floor revues are frothy, brilliant and fast. There are new and sharp individual stars (meaning Mary de Sibour at Pall Mall and Rosita Rio at the Lounge Riviera). There is the sleek music of the lately arrived Biltmore Boys' Orchestra at Carlton's Shar-Zad Room. There are such ace stand-by entertainers as Leo and Lauanna, of Mayfair; Matt Windsor, in the Anchor Room. Sh! Sh! No matter where you go this week, you'll be right. The night club picture is one of the blithest and brightest in months.

BLUE ROOM MYSTERY: There's royalty incognito in the Shoreham floor show this week—and there's been no end of backstage to-do about it. Because the minister of a certain country warned the royal act that the family name must not be used in a theatrical hook-up, Asst. Maestro Barnee about it. He'll tell you all—maybe.

The current Blue Room floor show is a double quantity of all right. Topping it are the Irlandias, with their impressions of the tango as done by such dancing partners as Mae West and Harold Lloyd, Garbo and Stokowski, Sally Rand and Stan Laurel, climaxing with a convulsing twosome of Marlene Dietrich and Der Fuehrer. Also there are La Trianita, White House favorite; Bill Brady, Hollywood's handsomest tenor, and Warbler Connnie Randall. Extra! Extra! Louis Amen, the Jimmie Durante of the piano," is playing dance interludes in the Blue Room—is also in the cocktail lounge in the afternoon.

SOCIETY LARK: Mary de Sibour sang and looked like a million last night at her Pall Mall Room debut. Her songs were all of the "hit" genre, included "I Feel a Song Coming On," "It Ain't Necessarily So" and "Let Yourself Go." The blonde Mrs. de Sibour was lovely in sapphire blue velvet with a puff sleeved jacket of claret crepe. Her appearance packed Pall Mall with a crowd almost entirely on the white tie and décolleté side.

TSCHAIKOWSKY AT TROIKA: When Sasha Lukas steps down from the bandstand at Troika and announces he is about to play Tschaikowskys "None But the Lonely Heart," he is greeted by gasps of delighted incredulity, followed by applause. As rare a treat as Sasha's solo, but in a different way, is "Kitchen Flirt," new skit by Bajon and Moskova. It might have come from the first "Chauve Souris."

LOTUS' TOYLAND: Would you like to dance with a doll? Those dancing dolls of Lotus' new Toyland Revue step out and pick partners from the audience in their "Change Partners" number. We predict there'll be a big stag line and cutting-in before the week is over. The Toyland Revue is a beauty all the way, but especially in the finale number when each girl impersonates a different type of doll. Star dancers are Marrone and Gallo whose "Whirlwind" (see pic above) is more like a cyclone, also tapstress Joan Merman who gives you "Rhythm Rib" to remember her by. Dance music is on double-allowance basis at Lotus with Bill Strickland's Dixielanders and the Continental Trio keeping rhythm afoot every minute.

PORTRAITS IN CAPRICE: Peggy Townsend happily anticipating that impending radio career . . . Jack Kerr also elated—over seeing his former leading lady, Beatrice Lillie, who'll probably be dropping into Caprice often during her Washington visit . . . Marco Rosales, draped in a serape, singing many Latin-American request numbers for a society group. He was on the sixth when we left.

BAMBOO CIRCUS: When the Pearly Magley Cocktail Shakers aren't staging a circus at Bamboo Gardens they're putting on a can-can. If you ask us, they're both circuses. Another spectacular act is that of the Casanovas, experts in the gentle art of nearly breaking their necks, thereby garnering storms of applause. "Ginger" Mason is fetching in a Hungarian dance.

300,000 AT METRONOME. That calls for an explanation. It means that Paul Kain's band is the first at a local night spot to be put on a coast-to-coast network. Paul and the lads are on the Rhythm Rhapsody program, playing directly from the Wardman Metronome Room. They'll be on tonight between 10 and 10:30. And if you're at Metronome, you'll be one of the estimated 300,000 listeners-in.

FAIRLY PERSONAL: Amon Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, outshone all feminine millinery wearers in the Mayflower Lounge the other day. Mr. Carter's chapeau was a large and handsome affair of cream-colored felt.

Dr. Edward Moore, internationally known eye specialist who treated the King of Siam successfully, is also a judge of good musicians. When Dr. Moore recently gave a party at his home near the Sulgrave Club, his chosen entertainers were Violinist Durward Bowersox (Rainbow Room) and Jack Gardner, who recently piano-ed with Sande Williams at Shar-Zad.

INTERNATIONAL: Ambassador to France William Bullitt, Ambassador to England Joseph Kennedy and Ambassador to Germany Hugh Wilson, recently lunched together at the Carlton. Eavesdroppers couldn't hear a syllable because the Carlton Trio didn't play quite as softly as usual.

SONGAGE CONTRASTS: "It Isn't True What They Say When You're Sixty," a very remarkable, not to say startling ditty being dealt off the arm by the Three M's in their big windup week at the Hi Hat.

"You're the Only Star in My Blue Heaven" which become the torchiest torch song ever when sun by Ray Beck in the Uptown cocktail lounge.

SEASONAL STYLES: Hour Glass has called off its style show for today because, after all, there's no point in showing skiing and skating togs in this sort of weather. If it snows or gets very cold, they'll hold the show soon—otherwise the H. G. management is pondering on the advisability of parading Easter bonnets or bathing suits.

Private Capital Joins PWA to Advance Program

To show the extent to which private capital and private credit have come into the PWA program, Howard A. Gray, assistant administrator, reported yesterday that "$1,638,000,000 worth of construction work is proceeding on the program although PWA has paid only $99,868,000 in cash advances."

PWA, he said, has approved 2,231 requisitions for advances of funds. At the same time, Government records show that $84,483,000 had been paid up to last week on PWA projects.

Colored to Observe School's 'Birthday'

More than 100 teachers of colored public schools were named by Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent, yesterday at a meeting called in Cardozo High School, to undertake organization and development of a program of celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of organization of colored public schools here.

They will serve under a steering committee, headed by Miss Mineola Kirkland, supervising principal of the tenth division.

U. S. Menaced By Fascism, Wells Warns

Lecturer Holds Church A Line Can Ward Off Danger

Through awakening to its real responsibility in the modern day, the Christian Church can ward off the threats of fascism in America, declared Charles A. Wells, writer-lecturer-journalist, last night at Calvary Baptist Church.

Wells, a member of the Quaker faith, warned that fascism was "dangerously near" in America, and that war would be the next step in bringing it about, because war "would result in centralized governmental and military control." With three or four men in control, one has to be the dictator, he added.

"If the American people are to avoid the loss of their liberties, they will have to exert all their efforts to prevent war," said he, "and the church is the center of strength to preserve that liberty. It is the only world-wide organization that can oppose war."

Wells, formerly publicist for Baptist boards, and now religious cartoonist for the Gannett Publications, will speak tonight at 8 o'clock at Calvary on "Life Under the Soviet and Christian Morality." His Thursday topic will be "The Secrets of the Godless Program," and on Friday, "The Cure for Our Modern Unhappiness."

Preying on Bereft Jails D. C. Suspect

Buffalo, Jan. 10 (AP).—Police announced the arrest tonight of Edward C. Rykaczewski, 21, on charges of obtaining money falsely from bereaved families by promising to arrange high masses for their dead relatives in a Washington monastery.

Police said Rykaczewski, alias Casimer Ryers, had claimed to represent the Franciscan Monastery in Washington.

Constipated? You Should Get at the Cause!

Lots of people think they can't be "regular" without frequent trips to the medicine chest. "I just dose up and get it over," they tell you. But doctors know they don't "get it over" at all—until they get at the cause of the trouble!

Chances are it's simple to find the cause if you eat only what most people do—meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Washington Girl Scouts saw the skyscrapers some time ago and thought little of it. Then someone began telling them of giant ant hills in Germany.

"That's nothing," said the Girl Scouts. "Come out and see the hills at Rockwood." The hills, built in the woods, are 3 feet high and as much as 6 feet in diameter.

When the weather is warm the Rockwood ants scamper up and down the trees, and every ant is doing something useful. And curiously, these "Rockwood" ants are no bigger than the ants to be seen anywhere. The Scouts wonder how they got the idea to build skyscrapers.

And then it was figured mathematically just what skyscrapers there were to the ants. An ant, it was estimated, is about one-twelfth of an inch tall. The skyscrapers are 3 feet tall. And out of the calculation came proof that the skyscrapers are twice as tall to an ant as the Empire State Building is to a 6-foot man.

Senate Group Unanimous for Murphy

testimony, but said he would have no statement unless asked by the committee.

Collis Redd, asked about membership and officers of the Constitutional Crusaders of America, which he said he represented, announced:

"I am the whole works, myself. I appointed myself a committee to combat the evils of this Government."

Raises Jewish Question

Like Sullivan, he repeatedly denied he opposed Frankfurter on the ground he was a Jew. Even more frequently, however, he referred to the Jewish question, once by reading a telegram addressed to himself, which asked:

"Why not a patriot of the Revolutionary times instead of a Jew from Austria, just naturalized."

Frankfurter Was Born in Vienna

The sub-committee was rather stern with Redd when he continued to mention that Frankfurter is a Jew.

"Are you opposed to Prof. Frankfurter because he is a Jew?" asked Senator Borah.

"No," said the witness.

"Well, leave that out of the record, then," the Idaho Senator snapped.

Redd insisted that his objection to Frankfurter was that the latter was author of the NRA and must have known when he wrote it that it was unconstitutional. Committee members objected to attribution of NRA authorship to Frankfurter.

Col. Cooper said Frankfurter had declared that the "due process clause" of the Constitution was "meaningless" and that Frankfurter should clarify what he meant. In his own court case, he said, the Supreme Court had nullified the ninth amendment. He insisted Frankfurter be asked for his views upon it.

Approval of Prof. Frankfurter's nomination will come today from Richard A. Staderman, president of the American Good Government Society, which publishes the American Good Government Review and claims a membership of 500. Frankfurter's record will be cited to show his abilities, and emphasis will be placed on his experience in administrative law.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, author of the "Red Network," a book accusing numerous persons in and out of the Government of radicalism, will appear today.

Murphy Action Is Surprise

The sudden action of the subcommittee on the Murphy appointment occasioned some suspense, since it was known there were many protests against his appointment on file with committee members. Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, had received 100 letters opposing the nomination. He had expressed himself as favoring Murphy's personal appearance to explain his actions in the 1937 sit-down strikes in Michigan. Murphy had expressed willingness to appear. Inside the committee, it was Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who made the motion of approval of Gov. Murphy without hearings. It was passed unanimously.

By way of contrast with this smooth sailing, it was reported there was a stormy scene in the Commerce Committee meeting Monday, when Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, moved to report the Hopkins nomination favorably, which would have obviated public hearings. It was reported there was an immediate outcry from both Democratic and Republican Senators and, after an angry interchange, Senator Pepper withdrew the motion and agreed to hold hearings starting at 10:30 a. m. today.

Three Writers to Testify

Hopkins will appear to answer questions relative to his administration of the WPA in the light of the report of the Senate Committee Investigating Campaign Expenditures. Newspaper columnists who reported the saying attributed to Hopkins that "we'll spend and spend, tax and tax and elect and elect," have been invited to appear also.

Arthur Krock, of the New York Times; Frank Kent, columnist for the Baltimore Sun, and Joseph Alsop, another columnist, have been asked to be present.

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee approved without hearings the nominations of Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward to be a member of the Social Security Board, Preston Delano to be comptroller of the currency and John W. Hanes to be Undersecretary of the Treasury. Confirmation by the Senate is expected later this week.

Transamerica May Fight SEC Over Its Books

May Challenge Authority To Subpena Records of Bank, Delaying Hearing

A court fight between the Securities and Exchange Commission and Transamerica Corporation interests over power of the commission to subpena the books of Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association, may develop by the time the SEC opens its hearings next Monday on Transamerica, it was learned tonight.

The commission is expected to subpena the books of Bank of America, 42 per cent of whose stock is owned by Transamerica Corporation, to obtain information regarding operations of Transamerica and its subsidiaries.

Transamerica interests, headed by A. P. Giannini, West Coast financier, may contest the commission's jurisdiction by refusing to turn over the bank's books, contending the comptroller's office has the right to subpena the books of the bank and not the SEC.

If the Giannini interests embark on such action, the commission's hearings will be held up indefinitely.

Meanwhile it was learned that R. P. A. Everard, secretary of Transamerica Corporation, has been subpenaed by the commission. Another witness will be W. L. Andrews, assistant treasurer.

The commission is expected to develop, in its hearings, testimony showing relations between Transamerica and its subsidiaries and transactions between them. Subsidiaries control enterprises from California as far north as Portland, Oreg.

These interests include fire and life insurance companies, mortgage concerns and land companies. Transamerica's chief holding is its interest in Bank of America, which operates 500 branches in California.

Bar Urges Jail For Lawyers in Mail Divorces

Will Work for Law; Calls Increasing Practice 'Scandalous'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—The American Bar Association recommended today it be made a crime for lawyers to engage in the mail order divorce business.

Informed that in some States the solicitation of divorce cases by mail had become almost scandalous, the association's house of delegates voted to work for a bill in Congress prohibiting the practice and providing maximum punishment of a year in jail and $1,000 fine.

The measure was recommended by the association's committee on professional ethics and grievances.

Dean H. W. Arant of Ohio State University's law school declared that "as divorce laws are made more lenient from State to State, the scope of this form of solicitation widens. First it was Nevada, then Wyoming and most recently Florida."

The association's committee on judicial salaries was instructed to consider and submit to the house proposals for "legislation making proper and adequate increases in the compensation." Federal district judges now receive $10,000 a year. The salary of Federal circuit judges is $12,500 a year.

Suffer Little Children

Over the issue of raising the embargo on shipments of munitions to Spain there are deep and fundamental differences of opinion in this country. But there seems to be unanimity as to the desirability of raising the embargo against the reception here of persecuted German children. This certainly is the impression given by the petition on the subject, signed by many prominent Catholic and Protestant churchmen, presented at the White House on Monday.

That petition comes with more force because it follows on the heels of announcement that the Society of Friends, acting with the approval of the German government, is prepared to undertake the removal from Germany of approximately 150,000 children for whom there is no future in the Third Reich. Many of these children will go to England, to France, to Scandinavia, Holland and other democratic nations where arrangements for their reception are now being made. The issue now raised is the number which shall be given haven in the greatest of the democracies.

If the United States is to play its part in this great humanitarian effort the problem will have to be handled entirely apart from the quota. Arguments against such exceptional action are hard to find. The children whose admission is urged would be carefully selected, would be subject to all personal immigration restrictions, and would in every case be placed in homes where their quiet assimilation into the current of American life would be an accepted responsibility. With such safeguards, and considering the urgent need, it is safe to predict that America will be ashamed to do less in this undertaking than any other country.

There are reasons, moral and otherwise, for opposing the exportation of arms, for private profit, to belligerents abroad. There are no reasons which will stand the light of day against offering the sanctuary of private homes to proportion of those persecuted German children whose plight is the more moving because their innocence is so complete.

Here is a constructive action, in a world where the general trend is tragically destructive, to which Americans of every creed can lend united support. The petition presented at the White House should serve to advance the day on which the first contingent of these children will land on the free soil of the United States. Undoubtedly admission to this country will save the lives of many of them. Perhaps more important, it will also help to save those national ideals which wither and die when they are only paid lip service.

The Constant Heart

Here in our brave new world appears a tale as pretty as any that has come down to us from the ages of chivalry. A young British engineer goes to Soviet Russia, the land where individual happiness means nothing and mass happiness, in some possible tomorrow, means everything. Even in such an atmosphere, however, love pushed through the door flies back through the window.

The young engineer falls deeply, ineradicably, in love with a Russian. He marries her. Then he is offered a job in Persia and takes it in the hope she will obtain permission to follow him. But, if it was once easy for love to laugh at locksmiths, it is not easy for him to laugh at Bolshevik bureaucracy or Soviet border patrols. The lover is dismayed to find he cannot gain permission to re-enter Russia and that his bride cannot obtain permission to leave it.

But he does not despair. Even in Russia there are said to be ways and ways, so he attempts to pull diplomatic wires. A year goes by, two years, four years. In four years many a love might wane, but not a love like his. He is at the point where he can endure separation from his beloved no longer. No matter what the consequences, he must end it. Thus he goes to Sweden, buys a second-hand plane and after a few flying lessons takes off for Russia. He is forced down in a field about 100 miles from Moscow and is clapped into jail.

Now a modern romancer, who had got his characters into any such fix, would probably get them out of it by an elaborate succession of intrigues, counterplots and here and there a little gunplay. But Bryan Grover got himself and his bride out of it simply by telling his tale and thus melting those supposedly hard Bolshevik hearts.

The lovers were permitted to meet. Those grim and formidable commissars might even have wiped cuffs against their eyelids as they watched the embrace. And having thus reunited them, the Bolsheviks permitted them, with what amounted to a proletarian blessing, to depart for England, though, being practical fellows withal, they confiscated the plane and collected a sizable fine before they did so.

This happy ending to the story is somehow a much more touching one than any that Oppenheim himself could have given it. For it shows that human love and human constancy can triumph sometimes, even in what seems an inhuman world.

Mr. Hopkins' Fitness

The open hearings unanimously voted by the Senate Commerce Committee to determine the fitness of Harry L. Hopkins for the position of Secretary of Commerce will afford an opportunity for candid examination of his qualifications. It is expected that witnesses who disapprove of his appointment will lay stress upon the disclosures of the Sheppard committee regarding political abuses in the WPA.

The open and shameless diversion of relief funds to campaign chests, and the exaction of political tribute from relief workers, are regarded by many as proof that Mr. Hopkins was an incompetent head of the WPA, whose record disqualifies him for his new position.

However, the impression seems to be widespread that when the tumult has subsided, the Senate will approve Mr. Hopkins' appointment on the ground that a Cabinet official is a personal adviser of the President, whose fitness is not its concern. If Cabinet members were simply advisers to the President there would be some justification for this "hands off" attitude. But such is not the case, although it is true that members of the Cabinet stand in a peculiarly close relationship to the Chief Executive and that it is their first duty to deal with questions of policy that concern the Administration.

Granted that the Senate ought to keep these facts in mind when testing the qualifications of a Cabinet appointee, it cannot afford to forget that the members of the President's official family are also heads of major executive departments of Government. While routine administrative activities can and should be delegated to subordinates by a departmental head, it is impossible completely to divorce issues of policy from matters of administration. Successful direction of policy, indeed, requires an understanding of the problems which administrative underlings have to handle.

Hence, Mr. Hopkins' toleration of the conspicuous maladministration of work relief in various parts of the country, while he headed the WPA, clearly gives his critics the right to question his competence for his present post.

It is conceivable that the time may come when the executive departments of the Government will be so well organized that their titular heads can devote themselves exclusively to policy-making. Even now the regular executive establishments have become largely immune to the shock of political changes. Their work is entrusted to a trained personnel which carries on regardless of the entrance and exit of Cabinet members. Nevertheless, it by no means follows that the departments have nothing either to lose or to gain from the appointment of a new head. The administrative machinery of any Government department is in constant need of adaptation to make it responsive to new conditions and capable of executing new policies. If it is under the supervision of a Cabinet official content to mark time, there will almost certainly be a deterioration of morale throughout the service.

Thus, while it is desirable to relieve the head of an executive department of routine details of operation, so that he may concentrate his attention upon matters of policy, it is equally desirable that he should be a man with a keen eye for defects of administration.

Cabinet posts should not be bestowed as a mark of personal favor, a political reward or a consolation prize. The tasks confronting a member of the Cabinet as head of an executive department are much more exacting than in former years and his decisions much more momentous. Consequently, it is the duty of the Senate to scrutinize Presidential appointments to such positions with care instead of registering perfunctory approval.

Mr. Hull Returns

Back from Lima, Cordell Hull faces as formidable a batch of problems as ever confronted an American Secretary of State in time of peace.

The international skies, east and west, are dark with gathering storm clouds. There is a very real danger that in Europe, as in the Far East, the situation may get much worse before it gets any better. And no amount of wishful thinking will save the United States from the impact of world events. It is fortunate, therefore, that our relations with the other nations of this hemisphere rest today on so solid a basis of friendship. Today there is greater measure of inter-American solidarity than ever before.

For this constructive development, the Secretary of State deserves a full measure of praise. At Lima he worked with patience and skill to tighten the bonds of amity throughout the New World. His success was very real. No delegation leaving Lima had any reason to feel that it had a grievance; each of them could rightfully argue that some, if not all, of the objectives it sought at the conference were achieved.

In the difficult days that lie ahead, this positive fact of inter-American solidarity may prove of vital significance. And in Cordell Hull, who has done much to create this fact, the United States has a statesman to whom all the American republics can feel grateful.

D. C. Overhauling Plans

It is not surprising to learn that E. O. Griffenhagen and his associates have found reorganization of the District government an extremely complicated task. Any political system which is allowed to grow in a haphazard fashion over a period of 60 years is likely to reach an advanced stage of confusion. Merely to account for the numerous disconnected boards, commissions and special agencies is a major task. To reassign their functions under a centralized and efficient administrative system is one of the most delicate processes of statecraft.

As to the first responsibility of the Griffenhagen investigators there will be little disagreement. Useless bureaus should be lopped off. Related functions should be consolidated or placed under the same administrative head. Municipal functions exercised by departments of the Federal Government should be shifted to the appropriate local departments. And finally, these numerous agencies and functions should be knit together into a unified system.

Presumably the Griffenhagen report will be devoted chiefly to steps essential to bring about an administrative reorganization of this sort. If its work is well done, and if Congress approves the changes, both waste and confusion in administering the affairs of the local government will be minimized. But that will not complete the process of overhauling.

The next step will be to confer sufficient authority upon the local government to permit it to manage the routine affairs of the city without submitting petty legislative measures to Congress. That reform is certainly as important as the elimination of overlapping functions. Until our municipal government acquires something of the powers habitually exercised by municipal authorities any administrative set-up, however efficient, will be stymied. So it is hoped that Mr. Griffenhagen and his experts will point to the need for broader local control over municipal functions as an essential supplement to administrative reform.

Consideration must also be given to the body which will exercise the broader powers the local community seeks. It would be practicable, of course, to lodge these powers in the present Board of Commssioners and minimize their administrative functions. Or, if the city-manager type of municipal government were adopted, a policy-making council of some sort would be essential. Such a council might either be appointed by the President or elected by the people.

In practice, of course, it makes very little difference whether the policy-making body is called a council or a commission. The more important factors are the creation of a sound administrative system and the specific delegation of sufficient authority to assure the community of responsible as well as efficient government.

Curtsy And Courtesy

From the Chicago Daily News

(A London newspaper reports that, at a tea party in Paris, Lady Diana Cooper and Mrs. Euan Wallace curtsied to the Duchess of Windsor. When afterward the Countess of Pembroke, an expert on court etiquette, objected, she was told by the other ladies that they did so to please the Duke.)

If to curtsy far too much is for the Duke of Windsor's duchess, since the British manner such is as to rule it out or order, try instead low genuflections to the lowest-born connections. Then there'll be no stern reflections whispered by the Court Recorder.

Little rabbits in their hutches, beggars stumping on their crutches, all know how to greet a duchess, with a scrape, a bow, a forelock. Why, then, is Diana Cooper acting like a cockney trooper if she condescends to stoop her knees? Is she a perjured warlock?

Even if the Pembroke countess of court etiquette the fount is; knows just what the right amount is one should curtsy, or be undone; surely, Mrs. Euan Wallace, quite at home in hut or palace, isn't wrong to offer solace to an exile barred from London.

Ah, the riddle is quite simple! Whether she wears crown or wimple; casts a sneer, or sports a dimple, bow the knee, doff the peruke! Stop this silly shilly-shally! Etiquette is really bally nonsense. Curtsy to sweet Wally! Blimey, it will please the Duke!

Another Quantum Theory?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The new idea of group medicine brings up a thought that might be worth printing. If you go to a grocery and ask for a dozen eggs, you get and pay for a dozen eggs; you get guaranteed fresh eggs for a little more, but in any event you get eggs. When you go to a doctor for eggs (relief or cure), he sells you an egg box, and if there are any eggs in it you can have them, but you pay for the box. When you buy eggs at a beauty parlor you get what you get, but in this case the eggs you bought were supposed to be beauty. When you go to college or one of these swank schools you pay for your eggs, this time in the form of education; what you get is a curriculum, and if there are no eggs in it that's your tough luck.

Now, the doctor and the beautician and the professor all knew (or should have found out) that there were no eggs for you—you couldn't acquire, and they couldn't deliver, relief, cure, beauty or education; but that's what they charged you for, just the same. The remedy, of course, is to fix it so that you pay for only what you get—besides manners from the doctor, rubbing and torture heating from the beautician and lectures you don't absorb, filled with information that you can't use, from the educator. You should pay for only that part of what you get that you can use, and let it be up to the seller to find out what you can take of what he has to give. Why should you pay the full price for an irreducible minimum or, actually, none of what you bought?

Why should I, bald as the Capitol dome, pay Paderewski's price for a hair-cut or, to cite a more familiar modern example, John L. Lewis'? It just doesn't make sense to pay for a hair-cut and get a neck-clip!

Sees Peace Endangered

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congress will soon be bombarded by the war profiteers et al. with fool theories endangering our peace and security:

(1) Determining and embargoing the aggressor, but not his victim, thus inviting the aggressor's retaliation.

(2) Repealing the neutrality act, so as to throw us back into the dangerous freedom-of-the-seas policy.

(3) Protecting "our" private interests in China.

(4) Enlarging instead of removing the President's present dangerous discretionary powers.

(5) The wrongful defeat of the war referendum act. If we're so crazy to help the democracies, we can do so aplenty (and still keep out) by selling them their war supplies, etc., under the cash-and-carry clause of the neutrality act.

The Cuban View Of Sugar Duties

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to refer to Mr. Frank Buckley's letter published in the January 1, 1939, issue of your esteemed newspaper, in which, upon the basis of trade figures for the years 1934-1937 showing that Cuba bought less merchandise than it sold in the American market, he concludes that my country has derived undue advantage from the trade agreement signed in 1934, the revision of which is now under consideration.

Aside from the fact that the reciprocal trade policy is not bilateral as is the trade policy of certain European countries, the truth of the matter is that although export-import figures taken singly seem to show that the advantage is on the side of Cuba, a study of the complete balance of international payments between our two countries gives an altogether different picture.

Without going into a statistical analysis, however, due consideration must be given to the many so-called invisible items that tend to effect a balance in the movement of funds, as for example: Service on that part of Cuba's foreign debt held by American investors (in 1937 this amounted approximately to $6,500,000); freight and shipping charges for the merchandise moving in both directions, mostly on American bottoms; insurance premiums; dividends on American-owned public utilities, railroads and sugar mills, banking, cable and telegraph services; salaries of American executives of these companies, etc.

Proof that the payments involved drain Cuba's resources, leaving no surplus to her credit, is the premium of from 2 to 4 per cent paid on American dollar exchange. This would not be the case if more money were coming into the country than goes out of it.

As to Cuba's privileged situation in the American market, it is a fact that her exports of sugar to the United States in 1926 were equivalent to 98 per cent of the total sugar consumed in this country, and that with the tariff increases of 1930, this percentage was cut to 28 per cent in 1934, the actual tonnage decreasing from 3,687,000 tons to 1,557,000 tons. Since the quotas were established in 1934, some relief has been given from this drastic curtailment by a somewhat larger quota, which nevertheless brings Cuba's exports to this market only to about half the 1926 tonnage.

The subsidy given to sugar production in Puerto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands by the Smoot-Hawley tariff of 1930 was altogether at the expense of the Cuban producer. (It might be added that since the tariff was reduced in 1934, in connection with the application of the quota system, benefit payments have been made to all American sugar producers, giving them added compensation which Cuba does not receive although she pays the 53 cents per hundred pounds excise tax from which funds for said compensation are derived.)

In closing I would like to call attention to a fact of which sight is often lost in considering the trade relations between Cuba and the United States. Since the first agreement was concluded in 1903, the preferential arrangements established therein have given definite and exclusive advantages to each country in the trade of the other as against third countries. Because of these concessions the United States had a practical monopoly of the Cuban market for industrial and agricultural articles.

This de facto monopoly, by which the merchandise from other sources, i. e., Germany, Canada, Japan, etc., is excluded, results frequently in Cuba having to pay a higher price for many American goods which, if it were not for these concessions, she could buy elsewhere. This is part of the price she pays for her share of the American market. Finally, an active Cuban market is an indispensable stepping-stone for the expansion of the shipping and exporting interests of the United States in other Caribbean countries.

Economic Monstrosities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter published in The Post of December 31, a British journalist tries to defend Chamberlain's action at Munich in selling out Czecho-Slovakia to Hitler. As that action is de facto indefensible, the Briton has to resort to spurious arguments.

His first argument is that the British were scared to death and therefore had to yield. Had war broken out, he says, London and all big British cities "would now be shambles full of the mangled bodies of our mothers, wives, sisters and all our children (to say nothing about the men)." In other words, all Britishers would have been killed by German bombs. If that argument is correct, then the British are certainly doomed. For they are scared in their boots and have no defense against German bombers. And in their fear they may be expected to sell out France and the United States, when occasion offers, just as they have sold out Czecho-Slovakia and are now selling out Spain. The British journalist proves too much.

His second argument is worse than the first. Czecho-Slovakia, he tells us, was an "economic monstrosity" for which Britain had no duty to fight. He does not explain what he means by an economic monstrosity and it is not necessary, for it has no bearing whatever on the question at issue. France was bound by a solemn treaty to defend Czecho-Slovakia against aggression, and England had the same obligation under the covenant of the League of Nations. Even if Czecho-Slovakia were really an "economic monstrosity," that would not release France and England from their obligation.

In reality, however, Czecho-Slovakia was, before the Munich robbery, economically about the best balanced country in Europe. Of its population 40.3 per cent were employed in agriculture, 36.9 per cent in mining and manufacturing and 22.9 per cent in other pursuits. The next best balanced country was Sweden, with percentages of 40.7, 31.0 and 28.3, respectively, followed by France, Norway and Denmark. All these countries were very nearly self-supporting.

If there was any "economic monstrosity" in Europe at all it was England and Wales, where only 5.6 per cent of the population were engaged in agriculture. Britain is such an economic monstrosity that it is in daily peril of its life—but that danger will be heightened, not removed, by cowardly yielding to dictators and thus making them all the stronger.

"In God We Trust"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I emerge from retirement to urge the Congress to defeat only measures that would arm America on a vast scale.

The great coming world struggle will be between "ideologies," between philosophies and ideas, not between armies. Hitler and his like will be overthrown, not by armies, but by the divine power and wisdom of a coming "philosopher king"—a messiah, or the Messiah himself. He always comes when the need for Him is greatest.

"All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Hundreds of passages of Scripture tell us to put our trust, not in arms, but in the power of God. Our very coins teach us more wisely than our statesmen—"In God we trust."

"Put them in fear, O Lord: that the nations may know themselves to be but men."

America, heed! "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we will remember the name of the Lord, our God. They are brought down and fallen; but we are risen and stand upright."

The Post Impressionist

Vignette Of An Artist

HAVE YOU ever wondered what it would be like to have a featureless face? Not featureless in a horrible way; but to have a pale, unidentifiable countenance that no one, after looking at it, would be able to remember?

Has it ever occurred to you to speculate on what it would be like to have no name? To be a person no one could refer to, or write to, or speak with? A living, eating, visible presence without any means of being recognized or known?

Quite likely your answer is "No." You are plainly an average human being, who is only too glad to be greeted heartily by your friends and acquaintances. "Hey! Bill," or "Hello, Helen. How goes it?" and "How are things with you?"

You are, even, probably so normal that it will be hard for you to imagine a person like Augustus Aloysius Fergusson.

Not that Fergusson would mind that at all. He was a man who wished fiercely that no one would imagine him, or even pay attention to him when he was unimaginatively present in the flesh. He wished to be nameless. So far as he could arrange it, too, he was nameless. Although at the christening his parents set up an awful handicap for him. Persons were always commenting about his name.

You must not imagine that because Fergusson was thus retiring, he was by any means a nobody. He merely desired, with a deep-lying, implacable unhappiness, to be treated as a nobody. To the rest of us he was something quite special, but to himself he was so far short of admirable that he wished to be completely ignored.

The time might come, he perhaps hoped, when he would be glad to walk quietly out on a stage and take his bow; answering without too much chagrin to the sound of his own name. But the time had not come yet, and as he was nearly 60 years old on his last birthday he was convinced that it would never come. Therefore while waiting the obliteration of death, he modestly sought the partial obliteration of prolonged absences from familiar haunts, and when at home interred himself in a brooding, back-stage existence.

There are times when I see petty, small-time mediocrities strutting their stuff; pretending to be someone they aren't at all; gladly accepting compliments for repeating things they had not thought of themselves, when I wish with a sort of loathing passion that there were more persons in the world with Fergusson's special complex. I have no doubt there are, but one consequence of it is that they are apt to come frequently to your attention. It is the cheap johns who cry out to be noticed; not the Augustus Aloysius Fergussons.

The central truth about the instinctive gesture toward obscurity that Fergusson and his like make from the very first moment they become self-conscious, is that they are not satisfied with mediocrity. They can be pleasant enough to others in whom mediocrity cries out in blatant profusion of sights and sounds, but in themselves even what appears to others to be good above the average merely evokes a sort of nausea.

They are perfectionists. They are, as was Fergusson, such devout artists that the idea they are trying to express in creative form—in paint, or marble, or wood, or words, or music—is all that they can really see, or wish to see. When they are forced to consider the tangible evidence of their dreams—the picture or poem or concerto they have actually created—they are forced to admit that, comparatively, it is extremely feeble stuff. So they want to hide their heads, like the ostrich, and to disappear from sight.

That explains, I am certain, the strange obsession of the artist Fergusson. In fact he intimated as much to me a few years ago, in a frustratedly bibulous mood, when he was trying to forget that "Seascape with Figure," which he had been influenced into submitting for the annual Academy Show, had been given the, to him, meretricious prominence of the Gold Award.

I spent most of that night with him in an obscure restaurant in a neglected part of the city, while at the Art Club men and women who had won the lesser awards were getting swelled heads under the plaudits of those who had won no awards at all.

"My God!" Fergusson exploded every few minutes. "Why, oh, why did you let me exhibit that piece of grandiloquent tripe? Why? Why? Why! ! "

When the appreciations of even the best critics began to appear in the journals a couple of weeks later I went around to Fergusson's home to show them to him. I thought that perhaps he would feel comforted.

But his son told me his father had left on a trip to Maine.

"He said," the young man reported, "that he had done something he was ashamed of, and was going away for a while in hopes it would be forgotten." EUGENE PHARO.

Washington Terminal Case

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You show the usual astute acumen in your editorial about the Washington Terminal-NLRB case.

What a pity that editors—being in the position they are in—apparently never have the time to find out something about that of which they write.

What shall we do? Shall we fire all the members of the NLRB, or do you think it would be better to leave them in for a while on the supposition that the damfools may learn something about their jobs? This is writ sarcastic! P. H. P.

A Matter Of Diet

("The Department of Agriculture announces that experiments have shown that many auto accidents are due to an unbalanced diet. A lack of vitamins found in leafy green vegetables, orange juice, eggs, milk, etc., causes deficient vision, especially in the early evening."—News item.)

I.

Do not curse the auto driver
If he runs you up a tree;
It may simply mean his diet
Is not what it ought to be.
Vitamins may be the reason
Why he seems so rude and rough,
For it makes for careless driving
When he doesn't get enough.

II.

If you're strolling on the sidewalk
In the gloaming and a car
Leaves the road and swiftly knocks you
Very high and very far,
Do not leap to rude conclusions
Or stage wild, indignant scenes;
It is possible the driver
Hasn't had his spinach greens.

III.

If you're driving in the twilight
And you feel a frightful par,
As you find the other fellow
Has just telescoped your car,
Do not even lose your temper,
And remember, if you please,
That it's possible his diet
Has been somewhat short of cheese.

IV.

If you hear your fender crumpled
By a driver very queer,
It's absurd to fling invectives
Till the fellow quakes with fear;
Smile and say, "It's O. K., buddy,
All the damage I excuse.
For I realize quite clearly
You've not had your orange juice."

V.

If you're parked and of a sudden
You are walloped from behind,
Do not lose your head and say things
That are crude and unrefined;
Say, "I wish you wouldn't do that,"
In a manner far from gruff.
"And I'm certain that you would'nt
If you'd eaten eggs enough!"

VI.

If you're driving down some highway
As the shades of nighttime fall,
And the driver of a coal truck
Knocks you o'er the garden wall,
Do not bark, or yell or bellow—
Keep your temper smooth as silk—
And say, "This is O. K., brother,
But I wish you'd drink more milk."

VII.

When you're coming from your driveway
And a great big motor bus
Socks you miles across the landscape
Do not fret and do not fuss;
Just smile sweetly at the driver
As the first-aid kit he brings,
And say, "This thing could not happen
If you'd eat more leafy things!"

Republicans Refuse to Nibble Wallace's Farm Control 'Bait'

Leaders Assert Minority Is Not Inclined to Give Democrats 'Something to Aim at' Before '40

A farm plan which would abandon crop control, establish domestic marketing quotas, and permit the farmer to take his chance on the world market with any surpluses he had, will be presented to Congress early next week by Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, it was learned last night.

Lee's plan, second proposal this session of a Democratic substitute for the present program, came to the front as Republicans on Capitol Hill made it clear they have no intention of accepting at any early date the challenge of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to put their farm ideas "into concrete bill form."

Political advisability of "giving the Democrats something to shoot at" was questioned by Republican leaders, who suggested 1940 would be soon enough to provide such a target.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, termed the Wallace challenge "an attempt to manufacture an alibi," while Senator Arthur Capper, Republican, of Kansas, deplored it as an effort to make a partisan issue of a "problem so vital."

Under the Lee plan, for which the young Oklahoman claims "considerable support," the farmer would be guaranteed a "fair price for all crops marketed in this country. For what he could sell abroad, he would take what he could get.

Senator Lee described the idea as a "return to our original two-price system" and said industry had been working under such an arrangement and found it feasible.

Builders Oppose U. S. Financing Of Apartments

A resolution against the Federal financing of large apartment houses was adopted yesterday by delegates to the eleventh annual meeting of the Middle Atlantic Conference of Building Owners and Managers at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The resolution said the building of so many apartments "through FHA guaranteed loans has in many instances caused an oversupply of apartments and consequent injury to an established industry with large investments in housing."

Two Washington men were elected to the board of directors. They are F. Wallace Stoever and Lew S. Mohler. Other local delegates included T. L. Betor, D. D. Burroughs, T. H. Evans, F. C. Suggests House Be Lectured on D. C. Problems

House members may be lectured soon on District problems if a suggestion by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, is adopted by the House District Committee.

Dirksen, ranking minority member of the committee, has suggested that the older committee members so use some of the time at the disposal of all members. He thinks such talks might help the House membership to better understanding of District legislation.

Some Thoughts On Armament

THE THOUGHT that we must begin to spend hundreds of millions for armaments is not in the least attractive to the American mind.

It is not only that we object to spending either our own money or that of our children for so unproductive a purpose. It is that our people are past the point where they believe war to be glorious, heroic or anything else except barbaric and stupid.

Our generation has gone through one war, and since the side that we were on won it we have no illusions about it. It left us with infinitely more problems than we had when we started. Our conception of patriotism is not related to national glory.

We would like to make a decent civilization in this country.

We are seeking new social inventions by which we can preserve freedom and make a more reasonably organized social order and integrate more intimately and efficiently the various components of our society—business, labor, Government and voluntary group activity.

All this is a hard enough task for our generation and the one that will follow it. By itself it will demand much sacrifice.

WHAT WE ARE trying to do, all the democratic countries are trying to do and because of this all democratic countries have been reluctant to increase their armaments.

This was particularly true of Great Britain and of France and of the Scandinavian countries and Switzerland.

The democratic countries as a whole have no ambitions beyond their own territories. There is no reason why they should have. They already own and control the larger part of the globe. They own nearly half of the surface of the earth, command all of its oceans, govern more than half of the world's population, control more than half of all essential raw materials, own practically all of the gold and conduct more than two-thirds of the world's total trade.

The territories which they hold are by no means fully exploited. The British empire has huge areas in Africa capable of supporting white men where neither the land nor the things in it have been put to use.

Elsewhere in the world, notably in South America, are whole areas capable of supporting enormously augmented populations.

AND IN EUROPE are Germany and Italy, with a population between them of 130,000,000, highly industrialized, virile, dynamic peoples, with limited areas in which to expand their energies, and in Asia is Japan.

These countries have made up their minds that the distribution of wealth and power in the world is disproportionate and unjust. I believe that no matter what governments should happen to be ruling these countries they would, if they were strong governments, have the same feeling.

No one who knows Germany could possibly believe that, whether democratic or Nazi, or for that matter communist, she would ever settle down to the kind of restricted life designed for her by the Treaty of Versailles.

The German capacity for organization—above all, the capacity of the ordinary German for work—could not be artificially confined, nor should the world wish to see Germany artificially hemmed in. The German qualities are qualities which the world can use. Love of work and pride in work, imagination, the infinite capacity for taking pains over small things, technical efficiency, robustness and tenacity—these are worthy of everybody's admiration. They have commanded mine always. I speak of Germany because I know it well and because I believed for 20 years that it was a country due to come into its own.

WE MUST ADMIT that the democratic nations had for 20 years complete world power. And they failed to use it to even approach a solution of the world's greatest solution—and that is how to use the resources, raw materials, money and labor of the world reasonably and justly, with a view to the prosperity of everybody.

Now we are paying for our smugness, our lack of imagination and even for our lack of ideas.

We are paying because these countries have started out totally to change the distribution of economic and political power. In effecting that change they are prepared to overthrow every existing political or cultural institution, and they have mobilized every possible instrument of aggrandizement, including propaganda on a wartime basis, trade and monetary warfare, and, finally, overwhelming force of arms. This is made possible by a new form of state—the perpetually mobilized nation, mobilized financially, economically, socially, morally and militarily. The question is not whether these countries are going to have a larger share of world power than they had a decade ago.

The question is not even whether they ought to have a larger share of world power.

The question is whether they are to have it on terms under which the rest of the world can live and retain the institutions dear to it.

IT IS A PARADOX, but I think it is true—the democratic world must arm in order to make a peace which is not a peace of Carthage. The democratic world must arm in order to prevent a worse world peace than Brest-Litovsk or Versailles—a peace, that is to say, which can only lead to another prolonged era of world war.

In order to make world peace with economic justice, there must be some equality of bargaining power.

There was no equality of bargaining power at Munich that the British Empire, with all her far-flung possessions and all her resources and money, not only could not stand up to Hitler but, more important, could not even sit down with Hitler.

The fact was that at Munich the British and French together had perhaps a fifth of the airplanes that Germany and Italy had together.

THE FACT IS that the German penetration of South and Central America is proceeding with amazing swiftness and there is absolutely no guarantee that within some foreseeable time we will not have a few Czecho-Slovakias on this hemisphere—and be as unprepared as democratic Europe was last September.

And certainly none of us can believe that terms dictated to a world by Germany, Italy and Japan under the present regimes would assure greater justice than those dictated at Versailles 20 years ago.

The terms will be infinitely worse, and the world which emerges will be infinitely worse, and the settlement of the real issue, which is how we can all live together, will again be postponed into an even more distant future.

THE GERMAN PEOPLE do not want war any more than any other people. Certainly the generation which went through the last war does not.

It is, therefore, extremely important that we should make peace before that generation is dead, for what youth with no recollection of the last war and brought up in a glorification of war as a normal way of life may do baffles the imagination.

We can only make peace by coming to terms on resources, trade and money policies with all industrially developed nations.

Such a peace cannot be made without the United States. And no reasonable peace can be made unless there is equality of bargaining power—unless every nation knows what not making peace is going to cost.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Their Own Way

IT SEEMS that the question of modern marriage was not settled by H. G. Wells, after all. Alec Waugh takes it up, with some new variations, in "Going Their Way: A Novel of Modern Marriage" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.)

Mr. Waugh is considerably less dogmatic than Mr. Wells used to be, and he offers a nice variety of solutions. He centers his tale about the Fane family. There was John Fane, fiftyish, who found escape from the worrying women of his family—wife and daughters—in peaceful secret afternoons with a woman 20 years his junior, "gay and indolent and fluffy, asking nothing of life but to be amused." When the young woman's husband insisted upon divorcing her, John Fane suddenly discovered that divorce might solve his problems, too.

JOHN FANE had four children. Basil joined him in his publishing house. ("My father began it as a hobby; I run it as a trade; my son treats it like a mission," he used to say). Basil was a modern; he belonged to the debunking generation, chary of big words, who "never said 'love;' they said 'like' instead . . . They called a love affair 'a party;' they spoke of being 'someone's tea.' Everything understated." He took his first romance that way, so was not overserious about marriage. But when his own marriage seemed about to shatter, Basil set to work as he would face a business problem, and worked out a satisfactory compromise, which left his wife free to have her own private life and himself, too, and the couple remained good friends.

Before Barbara married Hugh, they discussed marriage. Hugh was a public school boy and loyal to his code. If he fell in love with a girl of his own class, he saw no alternative to marrying her. So he married Barbara. But she became a successful actress; and Hugh's code also forbade him to live on his wife's earnings. And it was bad publicity for a successful actress to have a husband working as a clerk in a gramophone shop—so another Fane marriage went on the rocks. Muriel, meanwhile, married the man her mother wanted her to marry, and became a dull country wife and mother.

JOYCE, THE YOUNGEST, was embittered by her father's divorce. She acquired positive views about matrimony. "Occasional week-ends that no one knows about don't matter," she proclaimed. "It's liking the same things, sharing the same ambitions, laughing at the same jokes, having the same friends: that's what matters in the long run . . . Falling in love shouldn't have anything to do with marriage. Marriage should be planned, practically, like a career; one hasn't got to marry just because one falls in love."

"It's not quite so easy as you think," said Basil, who nonetheless more than half agreed with Joyce. And then Joyce, too, fell in love, and discovered that Basil was right.

That's Mr. Waugh's set of patterns. He never involves the reader as deeply in the passionate faiths and hopes as Mr. Wells used to do; nor does he spin out the arguments at quite such length. He states his cases and leaves the reader to take his choice . . . It's good reading, honestly stated and amusingly executed. But perhaps there are still other choices and patterns which Mr. Waugh did not include.

The most entertaining character in the book is none of the Fanes at all, but N. A. Giles, a promising novelist of the self-styled Lost Generation, whose promise turns successively from modern love to South Sea simplicity and, when the pound falls, to the class struggle at home and then to the war in Spain. I seem to have met him somewhere—perhaps several somewheres.

Roosevelt's Chart

By Ernest K. Lindley

'Digestive' Pause Indicated

MR. ROOSEVELT'S annual message and his Jackson Day speech should be read together. In the first he spoke as President of all the people, in the second as leader of the Democratic Party. Together they chart his course for the next year and a half—and also bring out the difficulties of his dual role.

As President he appealed for a united Nation—united, of course, behind democratic ideals and practices. As leader of the Democrats he appealed for a united party—united, of course, behind liberal ideals and a liberal program.

He believes that the Nation can pull together because a period of turmoil has been brought to an end by the general acceptance of the chief reforms of the New Deal. Some reforms need to be filled out, and others, he concedes, need to be smoothed down. The main task of the next two years, as he sees it, is to make ourselves strong against threats from without, by improving our national defense, and against menaces from within by lifting the national income.

AS PARTY LEADER, in his Jackson Day speech, he was concerned less with the next year and a half than with the years beyond. He again asserted his conviction that the Democratic Party must be a party of active liberalism, and again gave notice that he will fight to keep it that kind of a party. He said plainly that he intends to bring about the nomination of a liberal at the Democratic National Convention of 1940.

Mr. Roosevelt clearly ruled out of consideration, so far as he is concerned, three types of Presidential candidates: the man of conservative principles, the man who is merely a smart politician, and the nonentity who so often becomes the choice of smart politicians. He will accept as his successor an aggressive New Dealer, and nothing less than that.

Thus, for the present, there is to be a pause, or a slowing down of reform. The Nation needs a period for disgestion. But the President envisages no retreat. Our problems are far from solved, and new ones crop up continually. He wants a successor who will not only safeguard the reforms of the New Deal but carry them forward into the future. So, on the one hand, he is making tactical concessions to his conservative critics, and on the other he is surrounding himself more densely than ever before with New Dealers and preparing to fight off all contenders for control of the Democratic Party in 1940.

NOTE THE EMPHASIS which the President put on the independent voters who hold the balance of power, and on the young people whose vote rises proportionately each year. Note also his tribute to the men and women the New Deal has recruited for its administrative work from outside the ranks of the professional politicians—to the "brain trusters." Never, in a single speech, has he struck more effectively at the regular Democrats who believe that straight "organization" politics can win the next election and those lying still further ahead. For good measure, he even stressed the failure of Martin Van Buren, the reputedly smart politician whom Jackson picked as his successor. This thrust may not have been aimed at James A. Farley, but some of the New Dealers thought it was.

The specifications laid down by Mr. Roosevelt rule out almost every Democratic Presidential candidate in sight, except a few of those in his own official family: Hopkins, Ickes, Murphy, Wallace, Jackson, and, possibly, Hull. Of course, none fits the bill so perfectly as Franklin D. Roosevelt himself.

AS THE DEMOCRATIC organization throughout the country is still controlled so largely by conservatives, the President can bring about the nomination of a hand-picked successor only by convincing the old line Democrats that it would be suicidal to take anyone else. If they do not respond to argument, he can fall back on two threats. One is the threat to take no part in the campaign. The second, and more drastic, is to support a third ticket. The milder threat should be sufficient. The Democratic Party cannot hope to win in 1940 with a candidate who lacks Mr. Roosevelt's support. If Mr. Roosevelt's support is worth little or nothing by 1940, then there is no chance for any Democrat; the country will surely go Republican.

The conservative Democrats, of course, can play the same game. Realizing that, the President invited them to leave the party and join the Republicans. This is the advice he gave them in 1932, and which some of them, including two former Presidential candidates, John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith, took in 1936.

The plain truth of the matter is that the regular Democrats know that they cannot afford to lose Franklin D. Roosevelt and the bulk of his New Deal supporters, and Mr. Roosevelt knows that he cannot afford to lose the bulk of the regular Democrats. Both sides know that the struggle for control should be carried on without disrupting the party. But a family feud as intense as this one isn't easy to keep within bounds.

Roosevelt Announces Considering Increase In The Budget To Train More Colored Nurses At Freedmen's Hospital

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that an increase was being considered in the budget estimate for Freedmen's Hospital to provide facilities for training greatly needed registered colored nurses.

The President's budget statement, submitted to Congress last week, contains a $490,000 estimate for Freedmen's Hospital for the coming fiscal year, an increase of $39,920 over the amount provided for the hospital for the current fiscal year.

The increase is to permit utilization of an additional 100 beds at the hospital. The President, however, stressed the need for additional registered colored nurses, explaining that there were only two or three places in the country equipped to train such nurses.

Although Freedmen's is one of these, he said, the number of nurses turned out there is not sufficient even to fulfill the needs of the District.

The President's desire to improve conditions at Freedmen's is believed to reflect Mrs. Roosevelt's personal interest. The First Lady visited the hospital about a year ago and was greatly impressed by the need for improvements.

Mr. Roosevelt said he discussed the subject with Representative Dingell (Democrat), Michigan, during a call by the latter at the White House yesterday. Dingell, it is understood, was talking over budget matters and the question of the Freedmen's budget estimate came up incidentally.

Dingell made plain, however, that he would gladly support any plan which may be worked out to provide facilities at Freedmen's for training registered nurses. The President said he was having several people study the matter.

The expansion program for Freedmen's, it is understood, contemplates repairs to the building and improvements in the operating rooms and other parts of the hospital.

The President said a question had been raised in his mind whether he and Daniel W. Bell, budget director, had not cut the estimated appropriation for the hospital too much. He intimated that a report would be made to him.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Common Sense Called Ability to Direct One's Conduct In Accordance With Facts of Environment

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Speaking of "common sense," a topic invited by one of your correspondents in a controversial article published December 28, there are a few ideas that I would like to put down—on a purely suggestive basis. First, in regard to the word sense, Dr. Adolf Meyer, of Johns Hopkins, says, "Instead of studying the 'mind of a person,' I would rather like to study the sense of that person." By sense, he means, I think, the whole nature of the person as he actually is in everyday life—at work, as you might say; or "in operation."

This includes both the nature of the things or situations to which the person reacts, and the various ways in which he is capable of reacting. This embraces, of course, the whole range of the person's activities, of all kinds—sleep, work, relaxation, social pursuits, etc. etc. All this comes under the heading of a person's sense.

Now—when you come to examine what it is that permits of a "reaction" or of a "performance" in any biological organism, you find it involves symbols or signs. For example, an animal can react to a menacing situation by seeing the danger; or can track down another animal by the sense of smell, etc. Man has the five "elementary" senses, along with other animals, but also has the use of special symbols (i. e., special to man), namely: language (including written language and numbers) and concepts (e. g., moral, ethical, social, religious, scientific, philosophical, etc. etc.). The sense of man operates not only with such elementary signs or symbols as touch, smell, sight, taste and hearing—but also with a superstructure of language and concepts.

But, when you come to examine languages and concepts, you find that these symbols have essential social or common roots. Language, of course, serves and arises from, obviously social origins. Similarly with concepts. Take any scientific concept and see how many men have contributed, one way or another, to its origin. Or, take any ethical or religious idea and see how far back into history it can be traced.

Therefore, we might say that the sense which is specific for man, and which distinguishes him and sets him apart from any other animal, is social or common in origin or function. Man's sense is common and the thing which people have in common is their sense. In this strict use of the word, you might say that common sense is the basis of human activity of any sort . . .

Now, you may ask—what about the relation of common sense to the individual person? Well, if it's defined more or less as above, you might say that the degree of common sense of a person is shown by his ability to act on his experience and by his ability to acquire new experience. It is shown by his ability to modify himself and direct his conduct in relation to the facts of his environment. You might say that the common sense of a person is commensurate with his ability to deal with many different situations in a satisfactory way—i. e., satisfactory to himself and to others. People often think of common sense as being related to "savoir faire," which is quite in line with the liberal meaning of the phrase ("to know how to do").

Therefore, the common sense view of the person stresses the fact of modifiability. "Grumpy," your correspondent of December 28, who writes in to say that no one can do anything about how he feels, apparently doesn't recognize modifiability as a fact. Therefore, he doesn't recognize common sense as a fact. He's gotten hold of a distorted version of Freudianism (or perhaps not so distorted, at that) and thinks that instincts and impulses are absolutes which have either to be "expressed" or "repressed." Repression is bad—very! So go on and hit your mother-in-law with that hammer.

By this, I don't mean that there are not situations about which nothing can be done; except to change the circumstances, and possibly even this cannot be done. Nevertheless, the idea advanced by "Grumpy," that a person "cannot do anything about his feelings," is, as you pointed out, a betrayal of lack of common sense.

The 'Can't Cook' Brigade

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Cautious Bachelor's" tirade (of January 1) against women who boast they can't cook really tickled me. I have met plenty of women like that, and my impression has been that one and all are out to impress their hearers with their pampered backgrounds—real or imaginary. They wish to create the illusion of family means sufficient to permit the sheltered womenfolk leisure for "finer things" than menial or manual labor. The implication is that they possess other and vastly superior attributes. By some twisted process of thinking, they imagine that not knowing how to boil water gives them eclat.

Now, that is rather silly and pathetic, for the bulletin entitled, "Women in the Economy of the United States," issued by the Department of Labor, shows that "only five per cent of the families in the United States had paid help (in 1929)." Incidentally, I recommend this bulletin both to homemakers and to women employed outside the home, as a study in facts determining their value. It should be an eye-opener for both men and women, and should stimulate the reform and re-education of the "Can't Cook" brigade. Cooking should be elevated to its real status as a social art, and girls should be taught that to possess a Bachelor of Cooking rating is a real embellishment.

To be personal: After living abroad for many years, always with expert domestic help, my family and I returned to this country simultaneously with the arrival of the worst depression year. Hiring help was out of the question. My family's table tastes were discriminating and I did not know how to cook. It was with no anticipatory pride of achievement, but with grim dislike for the task, that I undertook to learn how to cook.

Failures were tragedies. Here was a challenge. The first successful pot of home-made soup (arrived at by the trial-and-error system) was a personal triumph that far outshone many hard-won bridge trophies of former years, and dimmed even the memory of certain social triumphs. With a few hit-or-miss successes to my credit, I bought the "International Cook Book," by the Browns. In no time at all, I had mastered several extra-special dishes to add zest to the regular simple fare.

Now I am a first-rate cook and proud of it, and my library of cookbooks includes all the old standbys, as well as the more sprightly "Salads and Herbs" and "Most for Your Money." These last deserve the special attention of any girl who, at minimum effort and cost, would like to impress her particular "cautious bachelor" with her culinary prowess. Sincerely,

PROUD COOK.

Fatigue of Body May Be Result Of Mental Upset

Unrelieved by Rest It Becomes Signal Of Danger

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

FATIGUE is a function or feeling in which the entire body has a part. It is not a sensation of the muscles only. The brain is tired and the eyes and the internal functions are sluggish as well.

It has many likenesses to that other general function, sleep, which we considered in the two previous articles this week. Like sleep, it may be earned from exercise, prolonged pleasant activity, or concentration on an agreeable task. Then rest will relieve it.

Or it may come on without any obvious reason, and in that case be accompanied by nervousness, so that, as in a person who is sleepy and yet cannot sleep, the result is an unhealthy state.

Danger Signal

Fatigue is distinctly a danger signal, unless there is a very obvious reason for it. And if it is not relieved by rest or sleep, it is even more distinctly a danger signal.

The cause may be physical, mental or emotional.

On the physical side, fatigue is the commonest symptom which human beings experience. It accompanies disease of any organ. It is likely to be the first symptom of an infection. It is present in heart disease, diabetes, kidney disturbance, digestive disorders or unsuspected high blood pressure.

Excessive and unhealthy fatigue is always a danger signal in the young. It may mean early tuberculosis.

Worry Causes It

Fatigue occurs, however, when there are no abnormal conditions in the physical bodily functions. Worry will cause fatigue. Emotional disturbances and mental upsets, such as an inability to solve a problem or come to a reasonable conclusion about a business matter, are equally fatiguing. A young friend of mine during the last few days has been worrying about passing an examination in chemistry. His principal symptom has been fatigue.

Such forms of fatigue are accompanied by nervousness and relief is correspondingly difficult. Rest, the logical treatment of fatigue, may not work. Indeed, it may be said that if rest does not relieve fatigue, something fundamental is the matter.

For the purely functional forms of fatigue, treatment by relaxation is to be recommended. Dr. Jacobson's book, "You Must Relax," is gospel for some of these. He advocates periods of lying down several times during the day and deliberately relaxing one system of muscles after another. This acts both by correcting the fatigue of the body and by helping to banish worry.

Stylist Praises Coiffure of Mrs. Roosevelt

Lochen, of Hollywood, Criticises Hairdress Of Wallis Windsor

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE COIFFURE of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was praised and that of the Duchess of Windsor criticised yesterday by Larre Lochen, Hollywood hair stylist who is in Washington this week at a local store advising women on hair problem.

"Mrs. Roosevelt," said Larre, as he is called in Hollywood, "looks years younger and more gay with her new soft pushed forward wave. Her features appear more charming and her whole appearance more womanly than when her hair was drawn back in a plain old maidish knot.

"However, the hairdress of the Duchess of Windsor is unbecoming and aging," Larre contends. "Not even a Duchess should adopt a hair style that is hardening and unflattering," he said. "Dolores De Rio makes the same mistake as does the Duchess. Both of these attractive women wear severe center parts and uncompromising waves which in their photographs look striking. However, face to face, their features would appear more feminine and appealing if their waves were softer and their styling gentler."

Shorter Bobs

Although from Hollywood, Larre admits that New York is the coiffure metropolis of the world. Both Paris and the West Coast look to New York for coiffure inspiration, he said, pointing out that movie stars were not free to experiment with new styles. Having to play a variety of roles the stars find the shoulder length bob more expedient. However, even Hollywood bobs will be shorter this spring, Larre forecasts, which will be in keeping with the general trend of hair. Larre also prophecies the pushed forward and softly waved hair line. He suggests a new wave curl, which is a deep wave rolled back into a curl, as a successor to the former masses of small curls.

Discussing Hollywood beauty styles in general, Larre said: "Joan Crawford's wide voluptous mouth is out. In its place Hollywood is developing a smaller rosebud type of mouth. Its impetus is forward and also like the new hairline, it is softer and more yielding.

Thicker Eyebrows

"The thin rapier brows of Dietrich are out. Thick healthy ones are in. Like the hair the best beauty treatment for luxuriant brows is absolute cleanliness and consistent brushing.

"Sheer, gently waving bangs are coming in. By summer many a former clear-browed lass will wear gossamer curls or bangs in the manner of Constance Bennett or Jeannette McDonald."

Andrea Leeds is named by Larre as the most beautiful screen player. He believes her simple casually waving coiffure is the ideal style for the average business or school girl.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 10.

WHEN I read a headline which says "Brenda Frazier Bows to 2,000," I am moved only to a faint dizzy spell. Who cares except the press agents? Probably not even this highly publicized debutante. And when I read that her tossing-out party ran to $25,000 or more, I feel worse. It is only when I recall the story of how Edythe Friedman, of Brooklyn, crashed that platinum brawl that I really feel fine all over.

ALICE HUGHES

It seems that Edythe, a college newspaperwoman herself, had a hearty yen to attend Brenda's party at the Ritz-Carlton. But a fat chance she had to get a regular bid. But we reporters are hard to baffle, and Miss Friedman figured out what our craft calls an "in." She took her college paper press card, dolled up in her best taffeta, and set sail for the Ritz.

Let Edythe tell it. "There was a man in uniform, and I handed him my press card. He read it, and said, 'All right,' and I walked in. Miss Frazier and her mother and stepbrother were standing there. And I walked up to them and announced, 'I am Miss Friedman. How do you do?' Miss Frazier responded 'How do you do?' Then they all smiled very pleasantly, and I passed on."

Into history, I may add. Not that crashes at such distingue orgies are rare, but Miss Edythe handled her entrance with such good taste and grace that she deserves a line in the pages of profane history. For it seems that some weeks ago she wrote Miss Brenda D. D. Frazier saying she would very much like to come to the shindy—and D. D. answered never a word. So just imagine the sense of personal triumph when Edythe walked up and said, "I am Miss Friedman." That was a moment for the memory book, if I know one at sight!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We have found time for one of the really swanky theater openings of the year. It was Marc Connelly's "Everywhere I Roam," written in collaboration with Arnold Sundgaard—a new hymning of our beloved country. Wonderful how United States-conscious we are these days, and quite right, too. Our new feeling of love for our native land surpasses the declasse word, "Patriotism." But to the opening! Louise Lamont, niece of Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead, is in the troupe, and a goodly delegation of Washingtonians was on hand.

Your Figure

After 30, Vigilance Is Needed In Keeping Face and Figure

Sagging Muscles Especially Should Be Watched Throat and Waistline Are Danger Points Dowager's Hump May Come in 40s

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF WE WANTED to be pessimistic about the whole thing, we would come right out and call them "the threatening thirties," "the dangerous forties," and "the dumpy fifties."

Once you're past thirty, you have to hang on to your looks with sheer determination. Unless you give it some encouragement, your circulation—which is the basis of your beauty—slows up. And then what? Plenty . . . the tissues lose their firmness, and muscles sag and drag the skin down with them. That clear-cut throat contour disintegrates into double chins and makes it obvious that you're "getting along."

In the middle thirties the figure begins to run to waist—but definitely! You have to put up a strong defense to keep from slipping into what is known as the middle-aged spread.

Then in the dangerous forties a pad of fat comes from out of the blue and perches on the back of your neck. And there it stays. More fatpads settle on the backs of the upper arms. Your hips take in a bit more territory. In time you lose your figure completely—and arrive at the dumpy fifties!

Can Regain Figure

But let's take a case where all that has happened to a woman . . . Let's have her thirty pounds overweight and with the padding of fat layered on all the vulnerable places. You think she can't ever get her figure back? Well, she can! There's a remedy that will make her over, and it is the combination of diet and exercise. In the first place, she must diet to draw on the stored fat.

If you were to figure this diet out mathematically on the calorie basis, you would find that it takes about six months on the 1,200 calorie diet to reduce thirty pounds. In the first month, eight pounds could be lost, in the second six pounds, in the third month five or six pounds, in the fourth month probably four pounds, and during the last two months of the struggle about three pounds each month.

If yours is the too, too solid flesh, of course, you lose slowly. And if you are plagued with water retention you might not register any loss for the first ten days or even the first two weeks, since, as the weight is lost it is replaced with water. Water retention has nothing to do with the amount of water you drink.

Exercise a Factor

In addition to dieting, you must exercise to change loose flabby fat to nice firm muscle tissue, banish the fat pads, and get a new and trimmer set of measurements. While you can never reduce faster than two pounds per week, you can slim off the inches at a pretty fast clip.

And don't stop with general exercise, or even special exercise for the waist and hips . . . Every woman needs chin exercises. If you seem to be inclined to lose weight in the face and throat first, you should take all your exercises with the hips propped up on a pillow, heels higher than the head. Any of the exercises for hips and waist which are performed on the floor can also be done in this position.

Garners Entertained at White House Dinner By One of the Peppiest Programs of Season

Guitarist Obtained Especially for Vice President; Many Congressmen, Wives There; Second Lady Holds Afternoon Reception

By Hope Ridings Miller
The Post Society Editor.

OF ALL OFFICIAL couples in Washington, the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner have the least desire for the social spotlight; yet, yesterday, they ran away with it entirely.

Mrs. Garner was hostess to about a hundred notables when she entertained at the Washington Hotel in compliment to the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club, of which she is president; and last evening, she and her husband donned their best bibs and tuckers to attend the annual White House dinner in honor of the Vice President.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The company of 82 guests attending the dinner arrived at the White House shortly before 8 o'clock and were ushered in with customary ceremony while the Marine Band Orchestra played some of its snappiest tunes.

The horseshoe table in the State Dining Room was decorated with pink carnations, buddleia and maidenhair fern, arranged with the handsome Monroe centerpiece, candelabra and epergnes. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who herself has been hostess at many White House functions, was in the company, which also included 14 Senators, ten Representatives, and a scattering of guests from service sets, several Government agencies, the press, and a few out-of-towners.

Following the dinner, a number of additional guests came in for the program that featured Alfredo de St. Malo, violinist, who hails from Panama; Magdalena Mendes Cajado, Brazilian soprano, niece of Dr. de Barros, President of the State of Sao Paulo; Julio Martinez Oyanguren, guitarist, and Sarita, Latin-American dancer and the wife of Ricardo Romero, composer-pianist, who played for her dances.

Guitarist There as Favor to Garners

President and Mrs. Roosevelt took special pains to obtain a guitarist for the program, having been informed that the Vice President and Mrs. Garner especially enjoy guitar music. Senorita Mendez Cajado gave a number of selections based on Brazilian folklore, and all in all the program was one of the peppiest given at the White House this year.

Dinner guests who with others in the company heard the program were, in addition to the Vice President and Mrs. Garner and Mrs. Wilson, Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah, Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Senator Kenneth McKellar, Senator Charles L. McNary, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Alben W. Barkley, Senator Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Senator and Mrs. Matthew M. Neely, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, accompanied by his sister, Miss Pauletta Guffey; Senator and Mrs. Lewis Schwellenbach, Senator and Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Senator Theodore F. Green, and Senator Josh Lee.

Both Parties Well Represented

Representative Adolph J. Sabath was there; also, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, wife of the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee; Representative Sam Rayburn, House majority leader; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., House minority leader; Representative and Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, Representative Patrick J. Boland, who was accompanied by Mrs. T. F. Moran; Representative and Mrs. William H. Larrabee, Representative and Mrs. John D. Dingell, Representative and Mrs. Melvin J. Maas, Representative Caroline O'Day and Representative and Mrs. Pete Jarman.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Halcomb were in the company, which also included the Undersecretary of the Interior, Harry Slattery; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Richard C. Patterson, jr.; Rear Admiral and Mrs. James C. Richardson, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert H. Blanding, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Walter C. Baker, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert M. Danford.

Still others there were Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ransom, M. S. Szymczak, Mr. and Mrs. C. Rogers Arundell, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Noble, Mr. and Mrs. Ulric Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Connolly, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cotsworth, jr.; Miss Genevieve Garner, William Green, Mr. and Mrs. Jay G. Hayden, Miss Ella O'Day, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Oursler, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Ralph B. Strassburger, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle C. Wilson, Mrs. Arthur Woods and Miss Marguerite LeHand.

Mrs. Garner Hostess At Large Luncheon

The spacious sun room on the tenth floor of the Hotel Washington ton was the scene of Mrs. Garner's luncheon. Cabinet hostesses, wives of Senators and former Senators, the presidents of the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Women's Club and a few of Mrs. Garner's other friends made up the guest list, which was headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

At the final meeting of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club last spring, Mrs. Garner invited the members to attend the party that took place yesterday; and if there was one missing yesterday, I don't know who it was. Seems to me, I never saw a bigger and more glamourous gathering of official hostesses. Wives of new Senators and wives of old ones met and mingled and had a gay time that lasted well on into the afternoon.

The sun parlor at the Hotel Washington has been the scene of several big parties at which the Vice President and Mrs. Garner have entertained in recent years. As everybody knows—everybody, at least, who has been fortunate enough to be invited to sample it—the Garner brand of hospitality, while not exerted more than two or three times during the year, is second to none. In contrast to many stilted and stuffed parties that punctuate the official schedule, their entertainments are lively, informal and refreshing.

Receiving at the door of the mammoth room where her guests were served buffet fashion, Mrs. Garner was trimly turned out in a black frock, accented with crystal buttons dotting the front of the waist, and a wide-brimmed black hat. Standing with her part of the time was Mrs. Roosevelt, who had on one of her most becoming frocks—a wine-colored ensemble, fashioned with a satin blouse and wool skirt, and a small hat to match.

Small tables scattered around the room accomodated the guests who gathered in small groups to enjoy the luncheon. At Mrs. Garner's table were Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, who wore a smart frock of moss-green wool and a brown cossack hat; Mrs. William B. Bankhead, whose snappy black hat and dress were set off with a sable neckpiece, and Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson in a black ensemble.

Feminine Celebrities There Full Force

Party Impressions: Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark, in a frock of raspberry red worn with a black shako, chatting with other Senate wives . . . Mrs. Warren Barbour, a stunning figure in black velvet, set off with a snatch of a hat, trimmed in fuchsia and violet ribbon and tilted over one eye . . . Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, entering a gay group and looking lovely in a two-toned frock, beige in front and black in the back, worn with a small black feather-tipped hat . . . Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, taking Mrs. Charles W. Tobey, wife of the new Senator from New Hampshire, under her wing and introducing her to other guests . . . Mrs. Millard Tydings, chic and lovely in a blue frock accented with silver fox buttons to match her cape and the trimming on her small black hat . . . Mrs. Hugo Black, who for a number of years was an active member of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club, chatting with Mrs. Claude Pepper . . . Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, smartly turned out in a black velvet frock with gold accents . . . Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, a particularly popular guest.

Still others noted: Mrs. Morris Sheppard, a handsome figure in toast colored wool, seeming to know everybody there . . . Mrs. D. Worth Clark chatting with Senator Hattie Carraway . . . Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, one of the handsomest women there in a black ensemble embellished with a silver fox neckpiece . . . Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, talking with Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Warren Austin, and Mrs. Key Pittman . . . and still others there, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. George Dern, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Edward Burke and Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WASHINGTON SOCIETY, which has been getting even less sleep than usual this week owing to after-theater parties for those fascinating Britishers, Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie, turned out again last evening in their honor. The Charge d'Affaires of the British embassy and slender, blonde Mrs. Victor Mallet were hosts at a late supper at their home on Massachusetts avenue. Many of the guests last evening had met the gifted pair at Mrs. Harry Black's party for them the evening before, immediately following the opening of "Set to Music."

DUDLEY HARMON

Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie are two celebrities who don't disappoint. Mr. Coward is just as amusing in conversation as he is in print, and the same goes for Miss Lillie, who in private life is Lady Peel. Whether famous or not both would be definite additions in their own right to any party.

MISS LILLIE WAS in black crepe with gold embroidery at the neckline; while Noel Coward appeared looking very debonair and wearing a red carnation in his buttonhole. Another member of the cast at the party was attractive Miss Penelope Ward, of London.

Stealing some of the show was the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, Joseph Kennedy, who came early and left early. Still others present were Arthur Krock, the Espils, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, the latter wearing a pale blue dress with flowers on her shoulder; the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van de Straten-Ponthoz; Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Dubose, Robert Coe, and Marian Trumbull in black.

Also the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, she in her favorite white; Mrs. S. Kent Legare, Miss Austine McDonnell, in a white dress trimmed with a gold sequin jacket; Count and Countess Roberti, Miss Irene Boyle, and Miss Barbara Wright, who wore a little black skull cap to match her black evening dress. Mrs. Horace Rumbold was accompanied by her mother, Lady Janet Bailey, who is visiting her.

Mrs. Mallet looked lovely in a black gown made with puffed sleeves and sequins glittering around the neckline.

PRACTICALLY EVERYBODY but the other members of the de Sibour clan turned out for the singing debut of Mrs. Henri de Sibour last night at the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh. Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour said they had made another engagement, and Mr. and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour were also missing—maybe they are still recovering from the fire at their home the other night. But Mr. de Sibour, husband of Washington's latest society singer, occupied a ringside table.

The mother of two children, Mrs. de Sibour bids fair to become the Eve Symington of Washington. Her voice is on the torchy side—especially in such numbers as Cole Porter's latest hit, "Get Out of Town," which drew loads of applause last evening. The pretty brunette singer, who was making her first appearance in public, wore a glamorous floor length, full skirted dress in duvetyn, the skirt blue and the bodice pink.

GLIMPSED AT THE Pall Mall Room were Miss Angelica Lloyd, sitting with Kemper Simpson; Willis Ballinger, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Straus, she in black; Col. Francis Harrington, newly appointed head of the WPA; Miss Peggy Townsend, seen dancing with Jock Merriam, and Dolly Corbin, seen chatting with John Galliher, and wearing a dress of gold lame.

LUNCHERS AT THE Carlton on Monday had the comparatively rare experience of seeing the three most important United States Ambassadors all at a table together—Hugh Wilson, William C. Bullitt and Joseph Kennedy . . . And who was the tall blonde young lady in blue lunching yesterday at the Shoreham with Attorney General Frank Murphy?

MORE PARTY NOTES: Mrs. Pearsons Rust will entertain at cocktails on Sunday . . . Taking no chance that their invitees have made another engagement, the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler have already issued invitations for a dinner February 15 . . . Mrs. Charles Lea and Miss Belle Gurnee will give similar parties January 25.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

JULIAN KEITH, a former master of the Warrenton Hunt, who celebrated his eightieth birthday on Tuesday by riding to hounds, was host with Mrs. Keith at a reception that afternoon. Mrs. Charles Beck, of Washington, their daughter, motored out that day to ride with her father and attend the party afterward.

Other guests were former Gov. Westmoreland Davis of Virginia; Amory S. Carhart, Morris Clark, William Emory, Robert Winmill, Mrs. Dorothy Montgomery, Harry Pool and Baldwin Spillman, jr.

AT THE meeting yesterday at the North Wales Club of the Masters of Fox Hounds of Virginia and the Southeastern States, including North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee, Algernon Craven, of Charlottesville, was re-elected president of the association. The business meeting was held in the morning and afterward a luncheon was given by Mrs. Craven in the dining room of the club, where the guests were seated at a long table.

Rep. Sumner, Illinois, Spats With Bromfield

Tiff Over New Deal Between Noted Author And New Woman Member of Congress Enlivens Women's Press Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Compared to Europeans, Americans do not know what it means to pay taxes, Louis Bromfield, Pulitzer prize author, told members of the Women's National Press Club at luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel. Sharing the program with Representative Jessie Sumner, of Illinois, newest woman member of Congress, the novelist took issue with her on several points.

Representative Sumner said farmers in the Middle West were worried and so burdened with taxes the extra money they received for their corn did not balance the budget. Mr. Bromfield, who has been living in Europe for 15 years and recently visited his birthplace in Richland County, Ohio, for the first time in a quarter of a century, declared he was impressed with the prosperity and progress he found there.

He saw no evidence of poverty or discontent, he said. The community had more than doubled in population, had new roads and bridges, two beautiful new lakes and an investment for the future.

He added that he found equal evidence of prosperity in New York, where theaters, night clubs and other places of amusement were crowded. "Long Island white trash" was his name for those who "shout longest and loudest about reforms which are inevitable in the United States."

Believes America Solving Problem

He contrasted the Works Progress Administration in this country with the dole system in England "under which some men at the age of 35 have never done a stroke of work, and now, if the opportunity presents itself, are unequipped either mentally or physically to handle it."

Representative Sumner cited her grandmother's experience as a pioneer woman and later as a Chicago grand dame as an illustration that class distinction does not bind Americans as it does Europeans.

"That was 75 years ago. Is it true now?" asked Mr. Bromfield.

"I hate pessimism," was Miss Sumner's prompt retort.

"And I hate wishful thinking," replied Mr. Bromfield with equal decision.

"If I hadn't done some wishful thinking, I wouldn't be here today, girls," was Miss Sumner's reply, addressed to her audience.

In response to a question as to whether or not she believed a woman should be President, she said if one were well qualified she would fight for her. "But I don't know any woman who would like to take on 15 years in it," she added.

Questions Outlast Duration of Meeting

Miss Sumner, following her talk and a long question period, returned to the Capitol before the luncheon was over. Mr. Bromfield likewise answered questions and, after adjournment, remained to answer more for those of the audience who were reluctant to leave.

In addition to giving his impressions of America, he discussed the European situation, asserting there would be no peace in Europe as long as Spain was under the control of Italy and Germany. Discussing France, he likened the common sense of the French to that of Americans. It was only 24 hours after they were faced with a crisis from outside their borders that they put aside their differences and began pulling together, he said.

Miss Dorothea Lewis, vice president of the club, presided at the meeting.

Mrs. Charles Bittinger, who was chairman of the guild's part in the drive, was reappointed to the position and will organize the members for it.

It was decided not to have the annual card party the guild sponsors until after this is over and to invite contributions of old gold and silver as an unique feature of it.

Guild members will be among those of the orchestra association who will attend the special concert at Constitution Hall next Wednesday night.

The meeting yesterday was held in the auditorium of the Arts Club, where the tea table was set with a bouquet of pink gladioli in a large silver bowl. Among those who attended were Mrs. Stanley Thompson, Miss Bianca Renard, pianist, who has played with the orchestra; Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer, Mme. Felian Garzia, Adele Payne, Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, secretary of the guild; Mrs. Daniel Borden, Mrs. Peter Langhof, Mrs. Rufus Lusk and Mrs. Oliver Owen Kuhn.

S. A. R. Leader Warns U. S. to Shun Europe

Kendall, Speaker at Banquet Here, Fears Foreign Entanglements

A warning against "interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe" was given by Messmore Kendall, of New York, president of the Sons of the American Revolution, last night in an address at the annual ladies' night banquet of the District of Columbia S. A. R. in the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Kendall, referring to the relations of this country and England mentioned the forthcoming visit of King George VI.

"With all due respect to King George, can we blind ourselves to the fact that, in these times, no head of a state pays an official visit to another state, especially to one of the great powers, unless he hopes to gain something by so doing?" he asked.

"Have you noticed the quoted approval of England's ministers over our saber rattling? Of course, they want us committed to their side."

"But, while we certainly want no entangling alliances with the dictators, neither do we want an alliance with an imperialistic democracy like France. We have no common purpose.

"And just a word on the subject of armament, let us not be high pressured into buying a bill of goods; we don't need just to be ready to do a little chestnut pulling again.

Chalmers Seymour McConnell, president of the District Sons of the American Revolution, presided, and short talks were also made by Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and by Mrs. William H. Rouch, national president of the Children of the American Revolution.

Additional greetings were extended by Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent of the District D. A. R.; Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, State regent of the Virginia D. A. R.; Mrs. James Henry Harper State president of the District C. A. R., and Charles Colfax Long, president of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Interspersing the program of talks following the dinner were several vocal selections by the Orpheus Quartet, composed of Miss Hazel Gem Hughes, soprano; Mrs. Elaine Sebring Ford, contralto; Jesse Nussear, tenor, and William Morrison Hanft, basso, accompanied at the piano by Prof. Otto Torney Simon.

With Mr. McConnell at the head table were Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, Mrs. Robert, Mrs. Pouch, Miss Chenoweth, Mrs. Sinclair and her son, Talbot Sinclair, Mrs. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Steele, Dr. and Mrs. Louis Charles Smith, Past President Kenneth S. Wales, W. Harvey Wise, jr., Benjamin D. Hill, jr., and the Rev. and Mrs. Samuel M. Groft.

Prince Georges Gaming Clubs Ordered Closed

Police Told to Shut 'All,' But 'Jimmy's Place' Not Mentioned in Command

Washington gamblers who have found Prince Georges County a tolerant paradise for their headquarters were alarmed, but not altogether convinced, by an order of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners yesterday directing police to close all gambling houses in the county.

"Jimmy's Place," the casino on Bladensburg road that has operated without serious molestation for more than a decade was not mentioned specifically. The county commissioners said "all" gambling houses, and H. Winship Wheatley, jr., the new State's attorney, said he would prosecute "all" such places against which proper evidence was gathered by the police.

Bet It Won't Close

Professional gamblers were willing to wager, however, that Jimmy's Place would not suffer greatly. They recalled that it had been the target for closing-up orders in the past, but always survived. The most that might happen this time, they predicted, would be that Jimmy's would close up for a while.

Jimmy's Place, one of the largest gambling establishment in the East, had Prince Georges County pretty much to itself until a year ago, when Washington numbers bankers, harassed by a new anti-numbers law enacted for this city, began to move out there.

It is now estimated that 75 per cent of the millions collected annually here from numbers bettors is handled by men who maintain their headquarters over the Maryland line.

Special Attention to Numbers

William A. Carson, chairman of the board of county commissioners, said yesterday police had been instructed to give special attention to the numbers racketeers.

"The board is convinced," he said, "that the decent element of the county does not want the stigma of being the refuge for racketeers driven out of Washington.

Arthur W. Hepburn, superintendent of police, said his force would co-operate fully in carrying out the board's orders.

Coeds Launch 'Chums of Wally' Movement at G. W. University

Organization Follows Demand of Oxford Students That 'American Colonies' Be Given Back to England

The Indians are about to lose their option on America, a sweep through the campus of George Washington University revealed yesterday.

Aroused by suggestions by Oxford University students that the "American colonies" be given back to Great Britain, G. W. students arose as one yesterday and enthusiastically shouted, "Let England have 'em"—with restrictions.

Things came to a head in the form of a front page edtiorial in yesterday's edition of the student newspaper entitled "Long Live Queen Wally!"

The idea, it was said, is for England to take back the Duke and Duchess of Windsor so "Wally can become 'Empress of America,'"

Quick to seize this as the spearhead of their attack, a comely quartet of coeds promptly launched a "Chums of Wally" movement. Cognizant of formation of a "Friends of the Duke of Windsor" group in New York City, they reasoned their movement could spread through the Nation as an auxiliary.

There was some talk about the Indians having prior liens on America.

Rosalind Lovell, senior; Jackie Maslin and Rae Neal, both juniors, and Miss Green, co-founders of the "Chums of Wally" movement, said it would be a good idea if someone would start a "Bigger and Better Curtsy" movement.

U. S. Indicts Jack Benny As Smuggler

Comedian, Charged With Chaperau, Denies Any Guilt

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—Jack Benny, radio star and gag-man, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today on a charge of smuggling jewelry in conspiracy with Albert N. Chaperau, pseudo-diplomat who has entangeld other notables in customs violations.

The three counts charge importing, illegally smuggling, transporting and concealing two gold clips and a gold bracelet—all diamond-studded—in 1937.

The domestic value was placed at $2,131 and the jewels were described out of court as gifts from Benny to Mary Livingstone, his wife and partner in comedy.

Benny pleaded not guilty. His bail was fixed at $1,000 and trial was set for January 24.

Chaperau was convicted yesterday. Comedian George Burns of the Burns and (Gracie) Allen team, and Mrs. Elma Lauer, wife of a State Supreme Court justice, have pleaded guilty in the same case.

Each count against Benny carries, upon conviction, a maximum of two years in prison and $5,000 fine. He flew here yesterday from Hollywood as a voluntary witness.

"I am utterly amazed . . ." he said. ". . . I have never smuggled jewelry or anything else into this country, and no one can truthfully say or prove that I intentionally committed the acts with which I am charged."

A Talk to the Consumer

By Percy Crosby

In printing "Would Communism Work Out in America?" chapter by chapter in American newspapers, holding back a few in case an order came for the book, I was rewarded by a letter from a New Yorker (and that city leads in advertising returns) telling me that he lost his place. After my first flutter of excitement, for it looked like a sale, there was a long silence, though my correspondent had the benefit of a letter pregnant with commercial feelers. Still there was silence, but whether this was suppressed silence or just silence, I am unprepared to say. While it may be construed as drawing unwarranted credit to the book, I put it down as silence.

In the meantime, since the edition was 5,000 copies which I circulated free, thereby enhancing the value of my files of silence for another day, the printers (as printers will) clamored for their type; it was becoming cobwebbed beyond recognition. While a book may be dismissed by the public, an author and publisher cannot dismiss crescendoed mutters of printers—"Pay us!" and "Give's our type!" In desperation, I showed the letter from the potential buyer, but listen the printers would not and the forms have been broken up.

When my boy came to me for a football, I gave him the remaining copy, but rescued the following pages from the dog's mouth.

VIII

Paging Karl Marx.

MILLIONS of people under the domination of one man rulers have either had cause to be grateful or resentful for the influence exercised upon the rulers by their wives.

However, no ruler's wife, I believe, ever has indulged in such peregrinations as those of Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt. A veritable gushing hither and thither to Bear Mountain, over the Smokies, and over the Rockies, ferry boating or aeroplaning, onward she goes, a dynamo of energy. A skip, hop and jump to a Camp Fire Girls' conference, and getting away just in time to don miner's overalls and a lamp to meet the photographers somewhere in the bowels of the earth. One imagines a flashing glance at a wristwatch and then a speed elevator taking the First Lady to the ground level where an aeroplane awaits. A whirr as a mountain is hurdled and we next find Mrs. Eleanor halfway through a radio program. These trivialities brushed aside, there's furniture salesmanship, perusal of school papers, gossip with children, egg frying, and sofa sewing is the grist for a daily syndicated column—"My Day."

I will quote from her column published August 14, 1937:

"In the evening we read aloud, finishing 'The Countryman's Year,' by David Grayson.

"I know it is all wrong to turn down the corners of pages in books. But what should you do if you want to find those pages again, to re-read certain parts?

"This book has many pages turned down. One page expressed so well what I often wanted to say, but I always felt inadequate when I tried to clothe it in words. I'll give it to you here from the book:

"'But one idea, one great and beautiful curative idea, I think I have seen growing through the years. I heard it expressed long ago by the Negro leader, Booker T. Washington. "You cannot keep the Negro in the gutter without staying there with him." I have seen it clear in Henry Ford's admonition that the prosperity of industry rests not upon the exploitation of labor, but upon making labor itself prosperous—thus enabling the workman to buy the products of industry.

"'Science, above all, is shot through with it:—For hookworm in any part of the world without endangering our own children. If this idea, that men are inextricably bound together, that the welfare of each is the welfare of all—if only this idea can continue to grow, to become greater and stronger, many human ills will disappear.'

"Bravo, Mr. Grayson! I wish you could preach that doctrine the world over! Many of us agree with you, but not enough as yet."

Perhaps in the writing, one gains some conception of Mrs. Roosevelt's gushing personality, and I believe her praise of Mr. Grayson's book is suggestive of that unrestrained enthusiasm for something looked upon as brand new. Everything Mr. Grayson has said is as old as God. I imagine the sentence regarding hookworm is misquoted, for it makes little sense. The idea that all men are bound together is not Mr. Grayson's idea by any amount of means, for it can be found in great philosophies and great religions.

Lenin, too, was taken by a book, which he enthused over to such extent that he never departed from its teachings and he believed in it so much that millions of Russians are now sharing the results of that enthusiasm, and they share little else.

The word "exploitation" is as plentiful in Communistic "literature" as fleas on a mangy dog.

"If this idea, that men are inextricably bound together, that the welfare of each is the welfare of all—if only this idea can continue to grow, to become greater and stronger, many human ills will disappear."—is embodied in the Constitution, which protects the individual rights of man and, by so doing, protects "the welfare of all." But the Constitution does not specify a working class alone—it means all classes and that is where Mr. Roosevelt parts company with the Constitution.

Since Hyde Park has a habit of turning down pages of books, why not turn down a page of John Mill's essay "On Liberty," where he writes: "A time however, came in the progress of human affairs, when men ceased to think it a necessity of nature that their governors should be an independent power, opposed in interest to themselves. It appeared to them much better that the various magistrates of the state should be their tenants or delegates, revocable at their pleasure. In that way alone, it seemed, could they have complete security that the powers of government would never be abused to their disadvantage."

If the time lags around the Christmas tree nursery, this extract from the same essay has food for reflection: "What was now wanted was, that the rulers should be identified with the people; that their interest and will should be the interest and will of the nation. The nation did not need to be protected against its own will. There was no fear of its tyrannizing over itself. Let the rulers be effectually responsible to it, promptly removable by it, and it could afford to trust them with power of which it could itself dictate the use to be made. Their power was but the nation's own power, concentrated, and in a form convenient for exercise."

The author means that its own will should be concentrated in the executive, not the will of Russia. Every act of the Administration is aimed to destroy "the welfare of each" and "the welfare of all."

Since such books are read openly at Hyde Park, it is no wonder that we have the New Deal. If, instead of turning down the pages, the President and his family turned down all the Communist rule books, the nation would be in a better situation than it is today.

Beauticians Fight Home Treatments

Cosmetology Board Promises Prosecution Of Operators Who Violate Regulation

Enforcement of the recent regulation requiring that only employes of a regularly licensed beauty shop can give treatments at their customers' homes, was promised last night by the District Cosmetology Board.

Members of the board asked the co-operation of nearly 500 shop operators at a meeting in the old Police Court Building in reporting unlicensed beauticians who violate the regulation.

Mrs. Ethel M. Beebe, treasurer of the board, stated cases of violation would be turned over to the corporation counsel for prosecution, whenever they were brought to the notice of the board.

Answer to Protest

Her statement was the first public answer given by her to the recent protest against the regulation by more than 200 prominent District women, headed by Mrs. Louis Brandeis, wife of the Supreme Court Justice.

Their petition declared the regulation, which permits home beauty treatments only by employes of a licensed shop in case of emergency, meant considerable inconvenience, while forcing many beauticians to go on relief. In a supporting opinion, J. Harry Covington, former chief justice of the District Supreme Court, declared the regulation was unconstitutional on the ground it denies equal protection under the laws. The regulation was adopted by the last session of Congress as part of the act to cover sanitary conditions in beauty establishments.

Mrs. Beebe declared the act, particularly the home treatment rule, was designed primarily to guarantee health protection to those who receive beauty treatment.

Work Records Essential

Earlier, officers of the board outlined the taxes and license fees required of beauty shop operators—business privilege tax, social security, unemployment insurance, compensation, profits tax, occupancy tax, owner's license. Mrs. Beebe warned the operators it meant money out of their own pockets if home treatments by operators who paid none of these fees continued.

Miss Gwen Geach, secretary of the District Minimum Wage Board, warned shop operators it was essential for them to keep records, showing hours of work for their employes and the weekly payments. These records, she said, had to be kept for a period of three years, "for your protection," since the wage board could enforce payment of back wages where the records showed the minimum of $18 a week had not been filled.

Individual shop operators declared after the meeting a concise summary of all the regulations governing their business, and of penalties they face for violations, was still needed.

Claims Court Pays Its Own Way With $19,000 in Fees

The small claims and conciliation branch of Municipal Court is on a self-sustaining basis with $18,882.90 paid in fees to the clerk's office, Clerk Edward M. Carr revealed last night in a report to the Attorney General.

Carr transmitted a summary of work of the branch from April 4, date of its formal opening, to December 31.

It showed that 972 cases (more than 100 per month) were settled before reaching the courtroom; 421 cases were conciliated by the judge without formal trial, and a total of 1,350 cases, or 150 per month, were actually tried.

Police Connect Boxer Scroggins With $1,600 Theft

A warrant was issued last night for Tobey Scroggins, 20, promising featherweight boxer who has appeared several times in Washington, in connection with the recent $1,600 robbery of two local sportsmen.

Police said Wallace W. Beach and Wallace B. Hulse, who were held up in the rear of 1322 Tenth street northwest last November, had partially identified him.

Two men participated in the robbery for which William (Dutch) Kappel, 27, has been indicted and is now held under $10,000 bond pending trial.

A short time ago Beach and Hulse passed Scroggins on the street and, according to Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis and Paul Ambrose, notified authorities. Police said they picked out a picture of Scroggins from a group of pictures of boxers who have fought here.

Citizens Urge Aviation Course In D. C. Schools

A resolution favoring establishment of a course in aviation mechanics in local schools was adopted by the Northeast Boundary Citizens Association at the Burreville School. The Board of Education will be asked to consider the matter.

The association also adopted resolutions supporting a proposal to elect District councilmen from wards and opposing a sales tax.

Officers re-elected were H. D. Woodson, president; James Hayes, vice president; Mrs. Lydia Norris, secretary; Mrs. V. L. Bundy, financial secretary, and the Rev. James Johnson, treasurer. Picked to serve on the executive committee were Mrs. Ada Herrod, Mrs. Carrie Knox and Turner Gibson. Delegates to the Federation of Civic Associations will be Woodson, Charles Norris, Bernard Chapman and Charles Thomas.

Overton Ready To Draft His Fiscal Plan

U. S. Payment to D. C. Would Be $8,500,000 On Acreage Basis

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, yesterday said he had practically decided to offer his District fiscal formula to Congress.

The statement was made at the end of a second tour of local institutions. The trip included the Tuberculosis Sanatoria, at Glenn Dale; the District Training School, at Laurel, and the Workhouse and Reformatory, at Occoquan, and Lorton, respectively.

Acreage May Be Basis

He praised administration of penal institutions by Ray Huff, superintendent, and indicated he would support a request for a $20,000 deficiency appropriation to enable the health department to put to use all beds at Glenn Dale.

While details of the formula have not been worked out, Overton said his idea is to leave out entirely from his figuring the highway and water funds.

Reports from District officials, he said, indicate 200 acres of local property are in Federal use and this might be the basis of his formula.

Aid Might Be $8,500,000

If the figure of 21 per cent suggested by District officials is applied to the 1940 District budget, after highway and water funds are excluded, the Federal payment would amount to less than $8,500,000.

Senator Overton plans to confer with Chairman Collins of the House subcommittee on District appropriations before introducing his legislation. Collins, who last year denounced the Jacobs report, declined comment on Overton's plan.

The Louisiana Senator said he considers the Jacobs formula of exchanging Federal and District services too complicated to be of practical value.

Retreats Made By 525 Women

More than 525 Catholic women have made retreats at the Washington Retreat House since September 1, it was reported last night at the monthly meeting of the Washington Retreat League at 4,000 Harewood road northeast. The Rev. John S. Spence, spiritual leader, was principal speaker. Mrs. Lynch Younger presided.

The league will sponsor a benefit card-party next Tuesday afternoon at the Retreat House.

Cleveland Park Rejects 1-Man District Rule

Members of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association want no part of the proposal to put the government of the District in the hands of a single administrator.

They said so last night in a resolution scoring the proposal which a group of experts, now drafting a report on District government reorganization, is understood to be considering.

In another resolution, the association again gave its support to the suffrage movement. Representation in Congress and the Electoral College was asked.

Summit Park.

The Summit Park Citizens Association was host to Capt. F. H. Young, the Coast Guard's Pacific Coast inspector, who is in Washington on a visit.

Capt. Young told some of his experiences in the service.

The association admitted a new member, A. C. Kirby, 3628 Alabama avenue southeast; went on record as opposing the Patman chain-store tax bill; asked that the park area between the curb and the sidewalk on Suitland road between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-eight streets southeast be improved; that a policeman be stationed at Barney Circle between 4 and 5:15 p. m. to relieve traffic congestion, and that benches be placed in Aanacostia Park.

Barry Farms.

Re-elected president of the Barry Farms Citizens Association, Elsie S. Huffman was given a rising vote of thanks on completion of 24 years of service to the organization.

The association went on record again in favor of naming the new Pennsylvania avenue bridge across the Anacostia River after John Phillip Sousa and reaffirmed desire for suffrage.

Location of the new Minor Teachers College on a site in Barry Farms was requested of the Board of Education. Another resolution asked the District Engineering Department for additional water and sewage facilities.

Officers re-elected were John H. Chinn, vice president; Levi L. Brown, secretary; Claudine T. Travers, treasurer, and J. E. Scott, chaplain.

Logan Circle.

A resolution opposing the chain-store tax as contained in the proposed Patman bill was passed last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association.

The association also adopted a resolution approving Senator Overton's proposal to change the lump-sum method of District appropriation to a percentage basis.

D.C. Junior Bar Backs Plan to Tighten Rules

Admission to Practice Would Include 4-Year Pre-Legal Education

Four proposals to raise District standards for admission to the bar last night were indorsed by the Junior Bar section of the District Bar Association, holding its annual meeting at the Mayflower.

At the same time, the Junior section of the Women's Bar Association, also meeting in the Mayflower, after hearing Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court, explain the workings of the small claims court, elected officers.

The bar association juniors approved an amendment to the District Court rules requiring applicants for admission to the bar to have a four-year academic degree, or its equivalent, from a college or university approved by the court, and to have graduated from a law school meeting the requirements of the Court of Appeals.

Would Limit Chances

The group also approved subscription by the District jurisdiction to the character investigation service for foreign attorney applicants conducted by the National Conference of Bar Examiners. It urged limiting of three chances to pass the bar examination to each applicant, except by special permission of the court.

The Junior Bar Section Committee on Standards of Legal Education and Admission to the Bar was directed to continue its study and investigation of an adequate system of character inquiry of bar applicants.

Officers Elected

The following officers were elected: Al Philip Kane, chairman; John K. Cunningham, vice chairman; Philip Goldstein, secretary-treasurer; John L. Laskey, Coleman Stein, John R. Reed, Earle C. Walck, executive council; I. Brill, George A. Cassidy, jr., John K. Cunningham, Turner T. Smith, delegates to the American Bar Association convention.

Judge Cayton, addressing the junior section of the Women's Bar Association, predicted that small claims courts would double throughout the United States in the next five years.

Election results are as follows: Helen Goodner, chairman; Burleigh Wormington, vice chairman; Cathryn Lawlor, secretary-treasurer; Mildred Gott Bryan, Virginia Breckinridge Parkinson, executive council; Margaret Luers, Mary McLean, Zelda Dove, Helen Goodner, delegates to the American Bar Association.

'38 Death Rate For D. C. Sets Low Record

Births Establish High Mark; Health Officers Are Elated

An all-time low for death rates in the District was recorded during 1938, Health Department statistics revealed yesterday.

The death rate from all causes dropped from 13.91 per 1,000 population in 1937, the previous low, to 12.92 in 1938, the lowest in the history of the city. A total of 8,099 persons died in the District last year, as compared with 8,761 the previous year. These figures include the deaths recorded at the Glenn Dale Sanatorium.

At the same time the District marked up the highest birth rate in 30 years. A total of 12,996 births was recorded in 1938, an increase of 750 over the previous year. The rate, however, based on a population of 527,000, was 20.73 per 100,000 population as compared with 20.74 in 1908, a difference of one one-hundredth of 1 per cent.

Infant Mortality Drops

The infant mortality also reached a new low point, declining from 61 deaths under 1 year of age per 1,000 live births in 1937 to 48 last year. The former record was the 1937 figure.

Health officials, highly elated over the decreases recorded in death rates, pledged yesterday to continue the fight against the high toll caused by tuberculosis and pneumonia.

Statistics revealed new lows in deaths caused by these diseases. In 1938 pneumonia caused 545 deaths, a decrease of 216 under the previous year. The death rate for pneumonia in 1938 wah 86.9 per 100,000 population as compared with 121.3 in 1937.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said this rate was by far the lowest recorded during this century.

Tuberculosis Declines

The tuberculosis death rate saw a slight decline from 94.9 per 100,000 in 1937 to 93.8 in 1938. Health officials pointed out that while this was still a "high" rate, it is the lowest ever recorded in the District. Total deaths from tuberculosis during 1938 were 588, including 134 at Glenn Dale. The figure for 1937 was 595, including 37 at the sanatorium. The marked increase in the sanatorium deaths is explained by the fact that the institution opened late in 1937.

Influenza deaths toppled from 98 in 1937 to 35 last year, representing a 64 per cent decrease. Decreases were noted in other death causes. Typhoid fever accounted for 5 deaths last year, as compared with 12 in 1937; measles, 2 in 1938 and 13 the previous year; scarlet fever, 3 in 1938 and 5 in 1937; whooping cough, 6, last year; 17 in 1937; diptheria, 7 in 1938 as compared with 14 in 1937.

Stillbirths increased from 429 in 1937 to 449 last year, explained by the increase in the birth rate.

The diphtheria rate for last year, 1.1 per 100,000 population, was a new all-time low, the previous record of 2.2 having been recorded in 1937.

300 New Members Join Jewish Center

Workers in the Jewish Community Center's membership enrollment campaign last night brought in a total of more than 300 new members at their first report meeting.

Burnett Siman, drive chairman, announced that the next drive meeting would be held next Wednesday night. Edward Rosenblum, director of the center, told the drive workers of plans for a victory banquet early next month.

Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the Zionist organization of Washington, will speak at the center tonight on "The Emergence of the Hebraic Influence in World History."

Dog Adopts All Tenleytown, Becomes Its Leading Citizen

Rover, Tenleytown's neighborhood dog, poses with his latest friend, 7-year-old Marie Enke, of 5300 block Wisconsin avenue northwest. Rover, a favorite with children, parents and policemen, often accompanies children to school. It is his ninth year as protector-playmate

Tenleytown's most popular and prominent citizen is a descendant of German-English parents, who quietly dropped into the northwest District neighborhood some nine years ago and invested himself with the duty of protecting the school children, the residents, and the storekeepers from miscreants.

Nine years now, and Rover, stalwart son of German police and Airedale terrier, has consistently refused to become a one-man dog, or even a one-family dog. He is what he started out to be—a one neighborhood dog, with Tenleytown as his good-deeds locale.

No one really knows where Rover came from, though there are various theories. He was first observed playing with the neighborhood's children and leading them to and from school, now making one child his favorite, now another. He made friends, too, with the housewives, and the storekeepers, and the policemen, so that today everyone in Tenleytown knows and loves Rover.

Janney School has a special "seat" for him, where he can attend classes with his proteges; and drivers of buses running to Alice Deal High School take him along when he accompanies an older friend.

For example, Rover used to walk to school with June Cosgrave, of 4615 Fessenden street, when she attended fourth-grade classes at Janney. Today June is 14, and not infrequently the self-appointed guardian will show up to accompany her to Alice Deal High School.

At night the canine friend is wont to show up at the Eighth Precinct Station, meet an outcoming policeman and batter along as he pounds his nocturnal beat. Policemen will tell you that Rover can detect when a store door has been left unlocked.

Rover likes auto rides, and nightly accompanies Miss Mary Ward Johnston, cashier at the Century Cleaning Plant, in 5500 block Wisconsin avenue, to the central store. During the ride Rover insists on sitting in the back, acting as guard.

Residents held it a privilege to buy Rover's license, an honor awarded to Harry B. King last year. The German-Airedale shares lunches and goodies with the children at school; or finds a warm welcome in any store or home. Never has he been known to nip or bite a resident of Tenleytown.

The mahogany-haired playfellow has one bad habit, however—one which he indulges in only on Saturdays, when he gives chase to a few autos as a sort of sport. He was seriously hurt several years ago, and police feared they might have to shoot him to ease the pain. But a veterinarian managed to save Rover's life, and he recovered after many weeks' of convalescence.

Again and again various residents have tried to adopt Rover, offering home and love, but he has remained loyal to his early conviction—and has remained Tenleytown's neighborhood dog.

1 Identified Among 64 in Crime Lineup

Woman Beats Off Purse Snatcher in Street; Fur Coats Worth $3,000 Stolen

Sixty-four suspects in the recent wave of petty crime faced 54 victims in the largest police line-up of recent months last night, but the result was anti-climatic.

Only one of the suspects was identified as having perpetrated any of the crimes. Alice Bolden, 320 H street southeast, told detectives she recognized the man who snatched her pocketbook December 24. Police gave the man's name as James Settle, 19, colored, no fixed address. They charged him with robbery.

Police officials announced 63 men would be released. They were caught in a dragnet drawn in the last few days through underworld hangouts, a method by which Police hoped to end the crime wave.

Woman Beats Purse Snatcher

Meanwhile, they continued to be plagued by reports of new crimes. A 22-year-old woman beat off a would-be purse snatcher in the 700 block of Minnesota avenue northeast and nearly $3,000 worth of furs was stolen from stores.

Miss Georgia Peacock, 4118 Grant street northeast, told police she succeeded in beating off with her umbrella a young colored man who attempted to steal her pocketbook. He fled after several hard blows on the head, she stated.

Two mink coats worth $2,500 were taken from Rizik Furriers, 1108 Connecticut avenue northwest, A. M. Rizik, proprietor, reported to police.

A similar theft was reported by Samuel Winkler, manager of Philipsborn, 614 Eleventh street northwest. He said a black fur coat valued at $198 was stolen.

Two Colored Men Held

In the meantime, 14 charges of petty larceny were placed against a colored man and 14 housebreaking counts lodged against a second by police.

George K. Pack, colored, 30, 1839 Twelfth street northwest, was accused of the thefts from parked automobiles. He is alleged to have taken $200 worth of clothing and small articles.

The second suspect is Walter Wilbur Smith, colored, 21, of 1712 Seventh street northwest, who has admitted, according to police, 14 cases of housebreaking in the Brightwood and Petworth sections.

Mr. De Mille Given a Lesson in Bathtubs!

'Artists and Models Abroad' an Ablutionary Hit; We Regret a Slight Confusion of Identities; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

DIRECTOR Mitchell Leisen has a retentive memory of the things he used to do under the megaphone of Cecil B. De Mille, the man who magnified the bathtub into a major item of screen art. Mr. Leisen, so one is given to believe, formerly devoted his illustrious talents to the formulation of the ablutionary sequences in the De Mille spectacles of feminine loveliness more or less in the privacy of the bath. Now Mr. Leisen turns around and shows Mr. De Mille what it probably was he had in mind "'way back there when."

BELL

This happens in Paramount's production of "Artists and Models Abroad," previewed yesterday afternoon by a quorum of the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks. One of the principal sequences in "Artists and Models Abroad" is devoted to an "assembly line"—an idea patently borrowed from the motor car industry—that takes feminine "raw material" and puts it through a course of sprouts that stagger the eye and would do the same to any husband's purse who had to pay for it. But the point is that Mr. Leisen, with his vivid recollections of Mr. De Mille's golden tubs has gone the master not one, but easily a few thousand better. His bath scenes are staged in cozy little tanks about the size of the Baltic Sea. They are, furthermore, sparklingly alive with the fluorescence—if that is what it is—of more shimmering bubbles than you have ever seen before in one phophorescent pool. What happens to the beautiful young women on the "assembly line," once in and out of this oceanic bathtub, is, of course, one of the gently and discreetly seductive things you will be watching for when "Artists and Models Abroad" opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday.

In fashioning this Gargantuan spectacle of a theatrical troupe practically stranded in Paris, Paramount quite obviously has "shot the works." The picture is long, it is big and it is staged with opulent splendor, even in its scenes of comparative penury. The story may or may not justify all of this far-flung pageantry—however you happen to feel about it—but there can't be much doubt about the qualifications of those in the cast to "put over" this sort of thing.

Meet Jack "Buck Boswell" Benny!

Mr. Jack "Buck Boswell" Benny is the star of the proceedings and, it seemed to me yesterday, occasionally was not so completely convulsing as he should have been. However, in the surrounding ensemble are to be found such adequate journeymen artists as Joan Bennett, Mary Boland, Charlie Grapewin, Joyce Compton, G. P. Huntley, "Punkins" Parker, the Yacht Club Boys—Adler, Kelly, Mann and Kern, in any order you like—Joyce Mathews, Jules Raucourt, Charles Reauvent, Adrienne D'Abrincourt and enough others to fill a telephone directory.

All these important figures in the development of the story architectured by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse and Ken Englund do a tremendous amount of dashing about and some of it seems just a little futile. The full effect, nevertheless, is one of irresponsible and mildly hilarious entertainment.

But, when all is said and done, Mr. Leisen's presumably perfumed baths are the thing! Anyone less than an Eleanor Holm would drown in one of them. A job as a lifeguard would be nice work—if you could get it!

You will find the name of Joyce Matthews back there, somewhere. You also—I hope—will find her likeness on this page today. Her name was here yesterday, but distinctly did not belong. By one of those inexplicable confusions of captions that occur now and then on the best regulated family newspapers, the photographic reproduction of the charming Marion Mann, appearing with Rob Crosby's Orchestra at the Earle next week, was labeled "Joyce Mathews." It was not Miss Mathews at all. This is Miss Mathews. That was Marion Mann. Deeply apologetic genuflections all around. It will have been noted by now, of course, that both are unusually attractive young women. But I suspect, at that, that each would prefer to be known by her own name.

Watch for the "Year's Ten Best" Tomorrow

Although not for release until tomorrow, the final vote of the Nation's motion picture critics, contributing to the Film Daily's annual poll to determine the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year," has come to hand and is an interesting document. More than 500 of us balloted in the Nation-wide summary, conducted by the trade journal published by Jack Alicoate, a former member of the staff of this paper. Our potential audience—even including this column's known five readers—is estimated to exceed 25,000,000 readers, newspapers, magazines and news services included.

Since this poll is deemed the most authoritative in the United States, through sheer preponderance of the number of scriveners participating, it might be well to scan this space tomorrow, just to find out how crazy we all are—as a kindly correspondent, over in Arlington, graciously stated in a personal letter to this column after our selections had been published here. (Adv.)

In case you may have concluded that those in charge of the Presidential Birthday celebrations, scheduled for the night of Monday, January 30, have gone to sleep at the switch, it may be said that news will begin to break tomorrow. There are some fine projects afoot—some of which will fall by the wayside, as such things always do, and others that will come true. Watch your daily paper.

Afterthoughts on "Set to Music"

There is a strong inclination in this department to go back and pick up all of the loose ends that were omitted from our review of Noel Coward's new revue, "Set to Music," starring Beatrice Lillie, which, on Monday night, enthralled a capacity audience at the National Theater.

The more we think of it, the tougher the job becomes. There are, to be sure, things the matter with "Set to Music," but they are so in the minority and so trivial, in view of the sum total of the fine impression left by this admirable excursion into the realm of frank and unrestricted entertainment, that recounting them seems hardly worth while. It seems to me that there might be a little more dancing. It also is a pursuing thought that a good many of Mr. Coward's songs are better than the voices that sing them, but that is meant as no reflection upon the vocal enterprises of Miss Lillie, Eva Ortega and the others who do so well.

There are times, needless to say, when Mr. Coward finds it difficult to maintain the high level of the best he has written into this piece. But Noel Coward's worst is so much better than most other peoples' best that this becomes a wholly negligible matter.

This column has seen a vast number of dancers in its time, but never one any better equipped than Bronson Dudley to show the other boys and girls how really to "pick 'em up and lay 'em down." He ought to be in the first act, too.

We would be perfectly willing to lay as high as 11 to 10 that "Set to Music" is "in" right now on Broadway as a smash hit. I trust that will not prove too much of a handicap for it to overcome.

There-Are-Too-Few-Hours-in-the-Day Note

There was a swell last line that was to have gone here, but, for the life of me, I can't remember what it was. This, emphatically, is not it!

MERLE OBERON,

costarred with Gary Cooper in Samuel Goldwyn's production for United Artists of "The Cowboy and the Lady," opening on the screen Thursday of this week at Loew's Palace Theater. Miss Oberon, it will be recalled, made her first definite impression upon the consciousness of American theatergoers with Charles Laughton and that fabulous Alexander Korda cast in "The Private Life of Henry VIII"

The New Yorker

New York, Jan. 10.

". . . and before you go out, dear, look over those Xmas wires . . . Yes, there's one from our son. Isn't it wonderful—only 15 months old, and he writes telegrams already, and can count, too . . . What? . . . Of course he can count. Well, look at the wire—exactly ten words."

12 P. M.: "Watch this break," a lawyer assures at the Versailles. Jay Gould's daughter, Mrs. Finley Shepherd, died last month. She had adopted Louis Seton, the most famous waif of his day. Well, although Mrs. Shepherd's estate is more than three million, she left Seton only $10,000. There'll be a law suit regarding the word, 'issue' in her will." . . . "Ed Wynn sailed from this country secretly on Friday," a reporter informs at the Tavern. "He sailed under the name of 'Edward Wind.'" . . . "On Thursday," a publicist states at the Paradise, "the Rex will bring $20,000,000 worth of Italian art for the Frisco Fair. The shipment, in its transcontinental trip, will be guarded by three armed Ethiopians." . . . "Next week," a detective confides at the Cotton Club, "the Federal grand jury will indict some important WPA contractors. Bernie Botein, in charge of the workmen's compensation investigation, will press the charges. The first one involved will be charged with an $85,000 violation.

1 A. M.: William McC. Martin, president of the Stock Exchange, checks his hat at Sardi's. "He never wore a hat until he became head of the exchange," Renee Carroll, the hat-checker, relates. "So that I wouldn't be deprived of a tip, Mr. Martin would check his wrist watch with me" . . . "Metro, which screened 'Clear All Wires,' will get 10 per cent of the movie sale of 'Leave It to Me,' the musical comedy based on 'Clear All Wires,'" Producer Vinton Freedley informs. "I offered the movie rights for sale today." . . . "George Jessel played at a Brooklyn theater last week," an agent reports at Armando's. "A process server wasn't allowed backstage. So when Jessel appeared on the stage and announced 'How d'ya do, ladies and gentlemen,' the process server arose from the audience, walked onstage and served Georgie."

2 A. M.: "The Group Theater's new Franchot Tone-Sylvia Sidney play, 'Gentle People,' a producer states at Harry Richman's, 'is being backed completely, by Tone himself' . . . "That man who just came in," a ringside whispers at the Havana-Madrid, "is Carlos, who entertained President Roosevelt in the Argentine. He's billed as 'The Man of 1,000 Sweethearts.' Look at him. He came in without a girl." . . . "Waiter," Tommy Manville directs at the 18 Club, "a bottle of champagne for every customer here, and for every employe. My secretary and I are going to Hollywood" . . . "You sound just like Donald Duck," the palmist tells a customer at Larue. "I am Donald Duck," he replies, "in the French and Spanish versions. Ask Walt Disney" . . . He presents a card: "Mr. Hallem Keep Williams—not Donald Duck."

3 A. M.: "Leon Turrou, the G-Man who broke up the Nazi spy ring," a Washington official reports at The Famous Door, "is going into business for himself. He's buying a bowling alley" . . . Brenda Frazier, wealthiest of the N. Y. debutantes, takes to the floor of the Stork Club, and joins the other ladies in a mad scramble for balloons containing small prizes . . . "Make one thing clear," a legalite advises at La Coq Rouge. "That former alderman, who is being indicted in the bus-franchise bribery case, never has been associated with any bus company" . . . "Woollcott is making another appearance on the 'Information Please' program, and threatens to sulk throughout the broadcast," a radio official reports at Leon & Eddie's. "'Remember, Alec,'" George S. Kaufman warned him, "a sulk doesn't go over the air very well."

4 A. M.: "I am instructing all orchestra leaders," Jack Rosenberg, head of the Musicians Union in N. Y., confides at Lindy's, "to conclude each night, by playing 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'" . . . "Evelyn Crowell," a band leader informs at Dave's Blue Room, "widow of Larry Fay, the slain racketeer, has changed her name for stage purposes. She's now Day Elliott."

5 A. M.: "The Filmarte Theatre, for the past three years, has played French movies which won the Film Critics Circle prize," a movie official relates at Reuben's. "But each time the scroll went to the film's producers. So last night the producers of the prize-winning 'Grand Illusion' were awarded a scroll, but couldn't find it. It was sneaked out of the place, to be displayed at the Filmarte. The man who did the trick was W. Hart, author of the new comedy, "The Primrose Path."

6 A. M.: ". . . No, dear, I couldn't fall asleep . . . Well, I've been reading about Hitler's rise, and it's made me think about last week . . . What? . . . Yes, last week . . . I've been worrying maybe I shouldn't have said those things to the man who was here—y'know, the house-painter."

'Winner Takes All' Into Filming Stage

The "Gambini Family" was back at Twentieth Century-Fox studios for their third picture, "Winner Take All." Executive Producer Sol M. Wurtzel announced that Inez Palange, Johnny Pirrone, Betty Greco and Eleanor Virzie had been signed to portray again the Italian family headed by Henry Armetta.

The Gambinis, who scored such a hit previously in "Speed To Burn" and "Road Demon," will be featured along with Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Slim Summerville, Kane Richmond and Robert Allen in the boxing film which Otto Brower is directing under the supervision of Associate Producer Jerry Hoffman.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 10.—We didn't need the exhibition of showmanship put on yesterday at El Capitan Theater for the most important step forward that the Hollywood actors here ever taken. I mean that air show for Gulf Oil, put on free by, with and for the benefit of our own people. We didn't need that exhibition but it helped. It's the first time Hollywood has raised a premiere like that with lights, glitter—both inside and out—and as many stars straddling the audience as they had on the stage. Because we're setting an example to all the people of the world and are about to take care of our own.

HEDDA HOPPER

When disasters happen, it doesn't matter where, what's the first thing thought of? Actors—to give a benefit! They're never too tired or too busy to give of their time or talent. So now, we're working hand-in-glove for once for ourselves. If this show goes over, and it will, it means that in two and a half years we'll have our own "home" and enough money to sustain it. The fund gets $10,000 a week net.

Norma Shearer has been appointed chairman of the talent committee. And Conrad Nagel, who was one of the founders of the fund, is giving practically all of his time free. He was offered a salary, but wouldn't accept it. Jack Benny allowed himself just seven minutes to get from his own show and begged for the honor of being on the first program. So did Joan Crawford, Judy Garland, George Murphy and Reggie Gardiner.

Eddie Arnold, on the day he started his new picture, was at the train at 7 o'clock in the morning, to meet Col. J. Frank Deuke, the Gulf's president. Eddie had never seen the colonel, but thought he should have a warm welcome.

And, to those stars who have been getting thousands of dollars a week for many years, and have never contributed that one-half of 1 per cent to the fund, I want to say, they may be extras tomorrow and among the first to need relief.

Understand that before Mrs. Walter Wanger's divorce is final she and Walter will stage a reconciliation. I've suspected it all along, because all during this separation Justine Johnston Wanger, who's a mighty sweet girl, and one of our real beauties, has been very much concerned over Walter's welfare and comfort. When Walter was trying to find a new home Justine would go over every detail of the prospective houses. One, which he liked very much, she turned down by saying, "Yes, it's very nice. But I know my husband wouldn't be happy here. He won't take it." He didn't.

Joe E. Brown has signed with Columbia for two pictures. I hope Harry Cohn will treat him better than his last producer. I still think Joe is one of the funniest comedians on the screen. But, oh, how he needs a good story. In a very short time his radio rating has gone higher than Joe Penner's.

All newsreels from now on will get the once-over by the censors. These newsreels can stir up more hatred than the dictators. On our side of the pond it's a relief to hiss and boo all the men and scenes we dislike. And in Europe, they've had the same fun about us.

Natalie Kalmus, technicolor expert, is just back from London where she had a terrible time getting the African natives out of their dirty rags and into fresh, bright-colored clothes for a picture. They were convinced she was trying to make them look like members of Parliament,

Lorre Re-Signed; Four New Motos

The Mr. Moto series launched two years ago, has achieved amazing world-wide popularity and has become a healthy rival to even the record-breaking Charlie Chan pictures, it was announced by Twentieth Century-Fox, co-incident with the renewal of the company's contract with Peter Lorre.

Lorre's present agreement with the studio still has several months to run.

The European star, who was brought to fame in the picture "M," is now engaged upon his eighth Mr. Moto adventure, "Mr. Moto in Porto Rico."

Four more stories in the popular series already have been selected by Executive Producer Sol M. Wurtzel for filming during the coming year. Jean Hersholt, Amanda Duff, Warren Hymer and others are appearing with Lorre in "Mr. Moto in Porto Rico."

Bucky Harris

By Shirley Povich

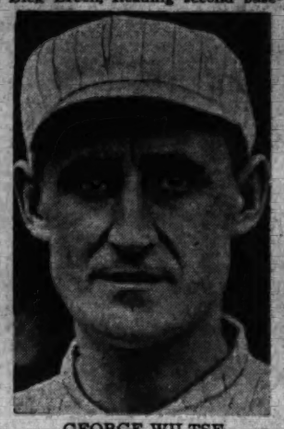
Chapter Four

IN A MANNER TO TAX THE CREDULITY of readers, 20-year-old Bucky Harris—a two-time failure in a cheap minor league and now reduced to a $5-per-game semipro around the mining towns—caught on with Reading in the New York State League. That was in midsummer, 1917.

The newspapers had told young Bucky that ball players were enlisting and being drafted in droves for the duration of the lately declared war. Teams were being riddled, but the New York State loop continued to operate. Harris gained new hope that he would get a baseball job. He pestered every manager in the league with telegrams, stating his availability and writing a strong recommendation for himself.

For days he camped at the telegraph office at his Pittston, Pa., home. And at the end of each day he tramped dolefully home empty handed and chiding himself for his once-fond belief that he—a rank busher—would be able to get a New York State League job.

But circumstances of which he was not aware were working in Bucky's favor. At Wilkes-Barre that week, Dick Breen, Reading second baseman, lost his temper, started a fight with Rex Calhoun, of the Wilkes-Barre Club. It was unprovoked, and Breen drew a long suspension. Reading Manager George Wiltse, one-time pitching ace of the Giants, was desperate. Breen had been his only second baseman.



GEORGE WILTSE.

SUDDENLY WILTSE bethought himself and recalled telegrams he had been receiving from an infielder named Harris. In his desperation, he was in a mood to take any kind of a chance. He decided to inquire about Harris. At a dressing-room meeting of the team, he asked his players if any had known an infielder by that name from Pittston.

Bill Donahue, a big pitcher, said "Sure. I used to play with him in the Canadian League. He might do us some good, too. Swell fielder and I think he'll hit enough. Why not give him a shot at it?"

And Bill Donahue had never seen Bucky Harris in his life. He was talking about Merle Harris, Bucky's brother, older by seven years, who had, indeed played with Donahue in the Canadian League. But Donahue, with his boost for Merle Harris, was merely extending himself for an old friend. Merle was only a fair ball player. But Donahue was reasoning that he now needed a job badly. It was little enough to do for an old pal.

So it was that on an evening in July, Bucky Harris answered the door bell and signed for a telegram addressed to Merle Harris. His brother opened it, expressed surprise.

"Somebody's crazy, Buck," he said. "This wire is from George Wiltse. He wants me to report to the Reading Club at Binghamton tomorrow. Must mean you. You're the fellow who's been asking him for a job. I retired from baseball four years ago."

Bucky couldn't understand the error in addressing the telegram to Merle. But he didn't try to understand it. It was enough that an infielder named Harris living in Pittston had been ordered to report to the Reading club. He shook hands with Merle, kissed his mother, and caught the next train.

REACHING THE READING CLUB'S Binghamton hotel, Harris bravely walked to the desk and registered. Then he set out to find Manager Wiltse. He found him in the lobby talking with Reading players. Bashfully, Bucky took a chair nearby. He couldn't summon the courage to introduce himself. He decided to wait a more propitious moment.

He overheard Wiltse tell a tall fellow: "Wonder where Donahue's friend is. Bill has persuaded me to sign some old-timer named Harris, from Pittston. Says he can play second base. He won't play for this club unless he shows up pretty soon."

Bucky's little world crashed down about him. He knew then that it was, indeed, Merle whom Wiltse had asked to report. The edifice of his thoughts crumpled and collapsed. He had a strong urge to flee the place.

Then timidity gave way to anger. Bucky clenched his teeth, drew a deep breath, walked over to Wiltse, tapped him on the shoulder and said:

"I'm Harris."

"You—Harris?" Wiltse said incredibly. And then he looked searchingly around the hotel lobby.

"Hey, Donahue!"

Bill Donahue sauntered over and Wiltse grabbed him fiercely by the lapel. "What kind of a joke is this, Bill?" he demanded. "You tell me you played ball with this Harris years ago. Well, look at him. He wasn't playing ball years ago. He was playing bean-bag."

BUCKY DELIVERED DONAHUE FROM his embarrassment. "Merle Harris is my brother," he spoke up. "He quit playing ball. I'm the fellow who sent you the telegrams. I'm the fellow who had a tryout with the Tigers."

Stick around until they got somebody else to fill in. What a reception that was. Young Bucky was ill at heart. He slunk from the lobby, his ears reddened, his morale so low he could have walked upright underneath a dachshund. And then he was rescued by his hot temper that, before, had always put him in jams. Now he was grateful for it. He'd show Wiltse, and the ball players who had been smirking. He was the only second baseman they had. They wouldn't get him out of the lineup if they ever gave him a chance to play. He vowed that.

Bucky didn't get his chance that day. Wiltse was still rolled. He wouldn't even talk to Donahue, and he was giving Bucky short answers. In batting practice, Harris didn't have the nerve to try his hand. He contented himself with playing in the field, shagging grounders.

Something about the way Harris fielded ground balls must have impressed Wiltse. For on the next afternoon, he said gruffly: "Harris, you're starting at second base—and batting eighth."

The inference was plain enough. Wiltse didn't have much confidence in Harris. Eighth place in the batting order is reserved for the rank bums. But Bucky was elated. He was getting his chance.

That day Bucky Harris made two hits in three times at bat. The next day, two more hits rattled off his bat. At the end of a week, he was still getting his hits, and he hadn't made an error. Wiltse had begun to melt. He had a smile for Bucky, and a contract that gave Harris $135 a month. He was a fixture with the Reading club.

(Another Bucky Harris article will appear tomorrow.)

Talk of Pro Football Replacing College Game 'Bunk,' Says Little

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 10.—There seems some doubt that college football will withstand the inroads of the professional game. "Bunk," says Lou Little, president of the American Football Coaches Association.

"Not only do I believe the college game will survive in a healthy state and continue to draw the larger crowds, but I don't believe a good pro team plays better football than a first-class college team like Texas Christian, Tennessee, Pitt or Notre Dame," says Columbia's coach.

"As for pro football replacing the college game, that's silly. College baseball faded before pro baseball, certainly, but there is a decided difference. The big leagues 50 years ago could draw on an army of sandlot players. The pro football leagues can't. The only place they can go for players is the colleges. College football must be in a healthy state to insure the success of the pro game. If attendance and interest in the college game lag, they will lag in the pro game, too."

Plan Bureau To Identify All Horses

Sloan Asks States to Follow Lead of N. Y.; Physical Exams Are Also Held as Need

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 10.—"Ringer" cases, of the type revealed at Pimlico last spring when the horse Utalino ran under the name of Bye Bye Will, will be eliminated if a national identification bureau for both horses and stablemen is established, John Sloan, of New York, told the convention of State racing commissioners today.

"The National Association could well fit into its plans the establishment of a national identification bureau of stable help, and later of horses," said Sloan.

"Many of the so-called evils of the turf may be traced to the haphazard method of employing stable help. Little or no record is kept of employes. If an undesirable employe is discharged, he is free to go to another track or another State and apply for a job. There is no check on his past. This fact alone may have considerable bearing on cases of drugging, sponging and ringing that appear from time to time.

Undesirable Element

"The establishment of a national identification bureau equipped with photographs of all licensed employes, such as we have in New York, would help rid the turf of much of the undesirable element. This would not be a difficult matter under a proper setup.

"A national identification bureau for horses to include photographs and markings, similar to our New York system, would be another step in curbing "ringers."

"With the national association maintaining complete records of rulings against owners, trainers, jockeys, stable help and horses, these would be available to all States through a system of service exchange directed from a central headquarters.

"In other words, all racing centers would be notified immediately by bulletin service of unscrupulous or detrimental acts involving those connected directly or indirectly with the turf. The national association already has made some progress along these ines.

Physical Examinations

"There are other sources of importance which might be sponsored nationally, such as physical examination of horses before a race, better living and recreation accommodations for stable help, proper patrol of stable area, sanitary stables and transportation facilities for horses, insurance for jockeys, routine physical examination for riders and more recognition of breeders on the daily racing programs.

"These are the type of subjects which I believe best fitted to serve our purpose.

"In general, the national association should be a clearing house for those things which are the problems of the turf everywhere, but do not necessarily affect the fundamental rules of racing itself.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Ellsworth Vines, world's professional tennis champion, tonight evened his barnstorming series with Donald Budge, world's amateur titleholder, scoring a 7—5, 2—6, 6—4 victory before 3,500 fans. Each has won three matches.

Hollywood, Jan. 10 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, outfielder for the world champion New York Yankees, said tonight he was waiting to hear from the club about a 1939 contract.

Joe, who demanded $40,000 last year but finally signed after the season opened for $25,000, said he had submitted no demands.

Gordon Jr. High Cagers Learn to Shoot Fouls, Pivot

Fred Mulvey Understands Gordon Boys

Athletic Head Knows How 'to Keep Swinging'

Perhaps Fred Mulvey, the monument-size gentleman who presides over athletics at Gordon Junior High in Georgetown, can understand when some grimey-faced youngster comes to him with the complaint, "The other guys won't let me play with 'em. What's 'a matter, ain't I good enough?"

Maybe Mulvey looks down at the kid and pats him on the head, saying, "What if you aren't. There are always a lot of boys a little better than you. Don't let it floor ou, though. Keep in there swinging."

Mulvey, himself, is probably the best example of an athlete who "kept swinging" you'll ever run across. The basketball fundamentals he is at present easing, or pounding, into the somewhat flighty heads of junior high lads, he came by a number of years ago under Ted O'Leary, coach of George Washington's basketers back when there was a depression.

Mulvey was no slouch, by the loosest interpretation of the word, at the game of dropping a ball in a peach basket. There have been better and there have been much worse. But Mulvey was dependable. The unfortunate part of his basketball career at G. W. was that he played when the school was undergoing its most trying ravaging flood of basketball stars.

Chief and foremost of these was the tow-headed and swivel-hipped Jimmy Howell. While Howell was leading all scorers in the District for two straight years, Mulvey played merely a dependable guard position with the Colonials.

Art Zahn was also at the G street institute when Mulvey was trying to get places. He broke his nose and got reams of publicity when G. W. trounced Loyola, of Baltimore, 63 to 36, but nothing exciting ever happened to Mulvey to get his name in the papers. Forrest Burgess, whom some sports writer investigated and found had never been scoreless in a cage game, and Tommy Fenlon were included in the parade of stellar shooters. What chance did a dependable player have?

Nova, Baer Meet in May

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—Negotiations were nearing completion tonight for a heavyweight contenders' battle between Maxie Baer and young Lou Nova at Yankee Stadium on May 25.

Baer and Manager Ancil Hoffman arrived in New York today and went into a huddle with Promoter Mike Jacobs. The match is expected to be announced this week.

Selection of May 25 for an outdoor show involving both of the most likely opponents for Champion Joe Louis' next big-gate title fight indicates that Louis will not make an outdoor crown defense in June, but probably will wait until September.

Hoffman said he preferred Nova, of Alameda, Calif., as Maxie's next opponent because he regarded young Lou as the greatest drawing card in the game, outside of Louis and Baer.

Dizzy Dean Says He Killed Rabbits Throwing Balls

Ottawa, Ill., Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Hunting rabbits in the closed season is against the law, but game wardens didn't think they would prosecute Dizzy Dean—even if the Chicago Cubs hurler was telling the truth when he said that he and Pitcher Si Johnson, of the St. Louis Cardinals bagged ten rabbits with nothing for weapons but baseballs.

If the wardens did decide to prosecute, however, they would have 1,000 witnesses. That many people heard Diz tell this story over a public address system in an interview:

"Me and Si were hunting rabbits in the woods near Si's home. All we had was a pocketfull of baseballs, but we got 10 out of 12 rabbits.

Decision to Armstrong

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP).—Two-crown Henry Armstrong won a gruelling 10-round decision over Baby Arizmendi tonight in a bout recognized by the California athletic commission as a world welterweight championship match.

Armstrong weighed 134½ and Arizmendi 136, just over his usual lightweight poundage.

A capacity house of more than 10,000, who paid upward of $25,000 to see the two in their fifth encounter, saw the Negro champion stave off Arizmendi's closing rally and win Referee George V. Blake's decision by a close but decisive margin.

Duplicating their last torrid clash, the two stood toe to toe throughout, hammering blows. Seldom, if ever, did the referee have to separate them.

The Asociated Press score card gave Armstrong five rounds, Arizmendi four and one even.

Armstrong was booed several times for what appeared to be illegal tactics with his head and shoulders, and in the tenth was guilty of butting Arizmendi in thme eye.

The Mexican charged back furiously, however, and carried the round.

Browns Solvent Despite Losses

St. Louis, Jan. 10.—For the second straight season under the new management, the St. Louis Browns operated at a loss last year, but President Donald Barnes told stockholders today the club was in "sound financial condition" and was making every effort to attract support with a younger, faster team.

Barnes said attendance last season was "disappointing" with the result that operating expenses "greatly exceeded" gate receipts. He did not give the exact amount of the loss.

Decision of Judges Is Unanimous

Wills Earns Decision Over Hoover; Litt Bows to Tobias; Corrigan Winner

By Jack Munhall.

Joey Ferrando, eighth ranking N. B. A. lightweight, mounted another rung in the ladder leading to a title fight with Champion Henry Armstrong by pounding out an unanimous decision over Norment Quarles, division trial horse, in 10 bloody rounds at Turner's Arena last night.

Spotting the former North Carolina Southern Conference titleholder three pounds, Ferrando won every round but the third, which was called even after Ferrando was low with one of the stinging left body hooks he used so effectively all the way.

There were no knockdowns, although Quarles fell to the canvas in the third when Ferrando rushed him in the corner and shouldered him but each man was bleeding freely at the finish. Ferrando received a slit over his right temple in the fourth when he butted Quarles' chin and Norment suffered from a cut over his left eye, the result of a steaming right in the tenth.

Ferrando Impressive

As early as the first round it was apparent that Ferrando, the little Brooklyn bulldog and winner of 51 of his last 60 starts, was far too fast and clever for Quarles, who dropped his first fight in his last five appearances here.

Scoring repeatedly with a stinging left hook, the same lethal wallop which has enabled him to win consecutive rounds in his last three fights, Ferrando peppered Quarles' solar plexus until at the end it resembled raw hamburger.

So quickly and expertly did Ferrando loose his specialty that Quarles often stood helplessly while blow after blow rained on his head, stomach or any other unprotected spot. Sometimes in that position he would absorb as many as five or six blows without a retaliation.

Badly beaten and as outclassed as he was, Quarles won the sympathy of the 1,200 spectators, one of the largest crowds of the indoor season, by his game stand. Calling upon all of his ring lore gathered in long years of campaigning, the blond Southerner managed to escape serious trouble, although in almost every round after the second he was giving ground in face of Ferrando's bulldog rushes.

Quarles' Best Rounds

Quarles' best rounds, perhaps, were the ninth and tenth when with Ferrando arm weary from his ceaseless punching seemed to slow up just a bit and Quarles connected with several hard left hooks, mostly to the body. But whenever Quarles seemed ready to turn the tide of battle Ferrando would open up with a withering two-fisted attack that caused Quarles to retreat and clinch.

In the six-round opening bout, Frankie Wills, of Washington, won an unanimous decision over Tommy Hoover, also of this city. Both men weighed 143 pounds.

Toby Tobias, former Miami University collegiate sensation, scored his second straight victory here by punching out an easy decision over Frankie Litt, Baltimore in a six-round semi-final.

Though his timing was badly off and he was a very weary young man at the finish, Tobias had little difficulty in pummeling his foe at will, both to the head and body. He lacked a finishing punch, however, and though Litt several times was groggy, he failed to floor him.

Palamede, Arcaro Up, Wins Final Tropical Park Feature

Grandever Runs Second To Veteran

Crowds Are Larger, Betting Slightly Off At Meeting; Three Winners to Arcaro

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 10.—Mrs. K. Ramsey's 8-year-old Palamede was the equine hero of the Gables Racing Association's final program of a 20-day session here this afternoon. The brown son of Ladkin made his local score read two triumphs in as many starts when he easily accounted for the Havana purse. With Eddie Arcaro, leading jockey of the meeting, who rode three winners today, in the saddle, Palamede reported a length and a half clear of Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Grandever. G. La Flesh's First Entry was beaten a length for the place.

Palamede, which came within one-fifth of a second of Brush Hook's mile and 60 yard track and world record in his recent victory, was a 9-to-10 choice and completed the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 3-5.

The Gables meeting winds up successfully, although the mutuels handle is estimated about 4 per cent below the same session a year ago. While the attendance figures probably will surpass last season's corresponding meeting, the betting was not in proportion to the crowds. However, the track has been run on a more economic basis this year. Highlights of the 20 days of sport were the successful innovation of morning racing on Orange Bowl Day, the return to silks of Don Meade and Eddie Litzenberger after long absences from the saddle; a streak of 21 straight losing choices and the sensational riding of Eddie Arcaro.

Perfectly Rated

Palamede was perfectly rated in the feature. Arcaro gradually moved up with the favorite while First Entry, Don Creole and Hi Cliff were battling for early command. Circling the leaders rounding out the backstretch, Palamede wore down First Entry entering the stretch and easily pulled away. Grandever also overhauled First Entry in the last furlong.

Hialeah Park, J. E. Widener's show place, opens tomorrow for 46 days, during which the best racing in Florida history is anticipated.

Velvet Mask, a 6-year-old plater owned by Isidore Bieber, completed a perfect score for the meeting which ended here today when he raced to his third triumph in as many starts as the card opened with a 6-furlong test. Coincidentally, the speedy $1,250 gelding made the same time in each of his triumphs—1:12 1-5.

Washington Sports Heroes, Past and Present:

Sweepstakes Victory, New England Invasion Maxie's Biggest Thrills

MAXIE ROSENBERG, at the height of his bowling career

Twin Strikes Won Rosenberg $600 in Campbell Event; He Disregarded Injury

(How Maxie Rosenberg skipped school to roll his first game of duckpins, how, at 14 he was the "house bowler" for a downtown alley and how he joined the Curb Cafe team in the National Capital League while still in knee pants, was included in yesterday's article.)

By Walter Haight.

Within two years Maxie had shot his way into the first five local bowlers. With an average of 108 (equivalent of 120 today), he was close to the city's ace, Harry Krause, who had 112. Maxie became so much in demand that at onetime he was rolling in four leagues and was anchorman in any number of match teams. Maxie's average rose along with improvements in equipment and changes of rules that made the game easier. In 1923 he knocked down the maples for a 122 average.

HAIGHT

Despite the fact that Rosenberg was, and still is for that matter, a top bowler for more than two decades, he was a "money bowler" and has registered a few record scores. His best all-time game is 182, not sensational as present scores go. However, he had a part in a record that still stands. On April 21, 1933, Dutch Newman, Joe Pricci, Joe Harrison, Astor Clarke and Maxie, comprising the Occidental team, rolled a 2,065 set for three games that still stands. Maxie topped the group with a 458 set, the highest of his career. Maxie has rolled a 100-flat game, which attests to his perfect control. He also won the Class A all-events in the Washington City Duckpin Association tournament with 1,115 in 1922.

Maxie's tried other sports briefly. His friends at the Rialto Club talked him into trying to be a baseball pitcher, figuring that his fine control of a duckpin ball surely would make him a sensation on the mound. Maxie pitched to the batters in practice one Sunday and roled an 89 game the next night. He decided he would continue to let bowling erase his chances as a pitcher.

His Greatest Thrill

His greatest alley thrill was in winning the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes in 1930. Maxie was 11 pins behind the leader and in fifth place going into the last five games of the 20-game competition rolled on different alleys and over a period of days. The day before the final block, Maxie, leaving home, slipped and fell on the ice, badly spraining his right ankle.

There was talk of putting in a substitute. One physician said he could not throw a ball for a week.

Maxie had bet on himself in addition to shooting for the first prize of $800 and a diamond medal. He was backed by his friends. So he went into the last block at the King Pin Alleys with his ankle taped as large as a wharf pile. He was only a couple of pins off the leader with five boxes to go, despite the fact that he was in agony with every heave. In the sixth box, he split, getting only two pins as his backers moaned. Shouts came from another alley. One of the leaders had made a spare on a strike. It looked as if Maxie was through. He took an eight on the box.

With his friends behind him chanting, "Come on Maxie. Come on Maxie," this money bowler whaled the ball down the middle and every pin scattered. He moved over to the other alley, seeming to forget his ankle. Wham! The ball hit the pins. They buckled like an accordion. Two straight strikes! Maxie was in front—and there he stayed.

When Maxie's gang got through with him, he had a sprained back in addition to the ankle.

Beat White, Tronsky

Maxie's greatest money bowling came a few years back. New England bowlers were making it hot for the District stars, just as they are today. Jack White and Nick Tronsky were the biggest of the Northern big shots. They also had Bill Tato and Carl Frisk.

The Washington bowlers had taken a beating from them in matches here. Maxie and his friends, loaded with greenbacks, invaded the White-Tronsky stronghold in Connecticut. The New Englanders were willing to roll for anything from marbles to yachts, but they never expected the kind of competition Maxie shot at them.

The great Jack White, downed in three out of four by Maxie on Saturday night, insisted on another chance the next day. Maxie took him again. Then he paraded through Tronsky, Tato and Frisk. They finally refused to shoot any more singles with this "wild man," as they called him. So Maxie chose Paul Harrison as his doubles partner, and the slaughter continued. Harrison got hot and, it is said, averaged 130 for 8 games.

It was not until last summer's hurricane that New England ever saw the like of Windy Maxie and the wreckage he left of what once had been substantial bank rolls.

Now Occasional Bowler

Rosenberg, due to business, has become an occasional bowler in the last two years, although last season he averaged 124 in special events.

However, Maxie has his own team with Astor Clarke, Joe Harrison, Ed Blakney, Hokie Smith, Pearce Wolfe and himself in the lineup.

Maxie, with his smile, his pep and good fellowship, has long been in the sports spotlight. It is only natural that Maxie, when he went into business, should deal in Neon signs. He is the proprietor of the Regal Sign Co. (plug).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VELVET MASK, $8.80, $4.60, $3.40; WHISPER, $9.00, $5.80; IRENE'S BOB, $4.70.

VELVET MASK, in close attendance of the pace on the outside, was carried very wide entering the stretch, but responded gamely and drew out in the last furlong. WHISPER, a forward factor, also raiding wide, finished stoutly through the stretch and shook off IRENE'S BOB. That latter, quitest away, showed the most speed, but faltered when the final test came. GOLD KNIGHTESS raced evenly the entire trip. THAT ONE closed a big gap.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:29. Off 2:34. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EXTENDED, $8.40, $3.80, $3.00; FRANCO SAXON, $4.60, $3.10; JUST AN IDEA, $3.40.

EXTENDED, away slowly, worked his way forwardly on the outside, assumed command with a rush entering the stretch and drew out. He raced a bit much the best. FRANCO SAXON, in tight quarters in the early stages, moved up gamely when clear, but was not good enough. JUST AN IDEA, well up from the start, held on gamely under punishment to outstay PHIL GOUGH. The latter faltered in the stretch drive.

Daily Double, Velvet Mask and Extended, Paid $34.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUBBLESOME, $7.20, $3.90, $3.30; LADY INFINITE, $8.50, $3.60; GHOST TRAIN, $3.80.

BUBBLESOME, vigorously urged in the run down the backstretch, assumed a short lead, saved much ground the remainder of the trip and, responding determinedly when the final test came, outlasted LADY INFINITE. The latter, compelled to race on the extreme outside the entire trip, raced courageously and just failed to get up. GHOST TRAIN, crowded back in the opening furlong, was again shuffled back midway around the turn, finished fast when securing clear racing room and was probably the best CHANGES, save for the way, himself in the stretch drive. PATSEY REGONE also weakened in the final furlong. ADDIS jumped into the air when the break came and was never able to get up.

Tech High Five Downs Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 26 to 12

Maroons in Fast Finish; 11-10 at Half

Kendall and Blank Lead Capital Team; Whalen Gets Seven Points for Losers

By Bill Burnett.

The basketball fortunes of Tech's Maroon Midgets continued on an upward trend yesterday afternoon in the McKinley gym as red-headed Charley Kendall led the defenders to a 26-12 victory over Bethesda-Chevy Chase High. It was the second time this season Tech has flattened the suburban school, both victories coming as the result of a sizzling pace in the stretch run.

Kendall, considered too clumsy for the squad last year, ripped the net with three field goals and two foul shots for a total of eight points. Close behind came chunky Eli Blank with a 7-point total.

The game, despite the decisiveness of the final score, was close and well-played for at least a half. Tech held a 5-3 margin at the quarter, and at rest time found its edge cut down to a mere 11-10. Even this was a complete surprise to the meager gathering, in view of the fact that Bethesda led, 10-9, with a bare 5 seconds left. Moe Shulman, Coach Bruce Kessler's prize discovery of last season, broke away as the seconds ticked off to drop a snowbird without any interference.

Whatever competition the Bethesdans had furnished in the first half, seemed to melt from their make-ups in the second half. Blank, Jack Walsh and Kendall sank a pair of baskets apiece in quick succession to settle the issue once and for all. Tech led, 19-12, after the third stanza. Bethesda's sole marker in the final half was tallied by Dick Whelan, spindly forward, on a running heave even he had little hope of sinking.

Fairfax Tops St. Alban's

Virginians Win, 32-18 Spoil Saints' Debut

Saint Alban's zone defense proved no puzzle to Fairfax High School yesterday as the Virginians beat the Saints, 38 to 18, on Saint Albans court. The loss was an inauspicious debut for Saint Alban's as it opened the season in its new gym which is housed in the newly erected $250,000 building on the campus.

It marked the sixth win of the season for Fairfax, as against one loss. With Ross Walker and Clarence Lusby leading the attack, Fairfax led throughout the game, holding a 8-4 lead at the quarter, due to the scoring of Staalman and Niff, and the fine defensive work of Lusby.

The inexperienced St. Alban's five tied the score, 14-14, at the start of the second half. Capt. Pete Slingluff and Bill Hannon tried to keep the Saints in the running, but the Fairfax offensive was too strong for Saint Alban's zone defense.

Mickey Schonfeld, Heurich Brewer star, and coach of St. Albans, inserted a new team into the fray in the first period, but to no avail as the Virginians made good on their shots.

P. Harrison Bowls 410

Paul Harrison, one of the city's leading bowlers until laid low with an illness last season, continued his fine comeback last night by rolling a high set of 410 for Sholl's Cafe in the Columbia Heights League competition at Arcadia alleys.

Al Wright, Hessick Coal, won high-game honors with 164. Arcade-Pontiac turned in high-team game, 645, and Hessick high-team set, 1,820.

Meanwhile, Arcadia, taking two games from Lucky Five, moved into a first-place tie with Chaconas Market, which lost two to Arcade-Pontiac.

In the Lutheran Church Men's League, Harry Mertz, Keller No. 1, posted a 126 and 365 for high game and set. St. Paul No. 1 took high team set with 561 and St. Paul No. 11, high team game with 561.

In the Lutheran Church Ladies' League at Arcadia, Rhoda Hennig, Trinity No. 1 and Keller Memorial dominated the matches. Miss Hennig won high game with 125 and high set with 324 while Keller Memorial took team honors with 489 and 1,447.

In the Mount Rainier League at Mount Rainier Alleys, M. P. M. Market, paced by Walsh's 134, high game of the evening, won two games from Super Service.

District Indoor Baseball Crown Retained by Legion

Victory Post of the American Legion won the indoor baseball championship of the District of Columbia for the second year in succession when it handed the Community All-Stars a 6-to-2 shellacking last night at Tech gym.

This victory gave the Legionnaires the title for both halves of the schedule. They finished the season with a record of 12 won and only one game lost.

The "Nine Old Men" put the game on ice by bunching hits with walks in the third and fifth stanzas. "Tarzan" Webb started both rallies with walks and some fancy base running. Temple Jarrell's fielding scintillated.

Navy Boxers Bid For Jobs to Face Cornell, Jan. 21

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10.—Elimination matches to pick the boxing team which will start against Cornell here, January 21, are going on daily at the Naval Academy, under the direction of Coach Spike Webb.

With plenty of veterans from last year's varsity squad and an unusual group of recruits from the plebes, the competition is stronger than for several years.

In the two higher weights, much depends upon whether Cliff Lenz, the stalwart football back, is able to join the squad. This will be decided within a few days.

Should Lenz be unable to box, Mike Wallace, the football center will be moved to the unlimited division and his place at 175 pounds, will probably be taken by Bill Worden, another football man.

Purple Five Wins, 24-14

Washington-L. Loses; Rice Leads Gonzaga

Gonzaga Prep basketers earned their first victory of the season yesterday on the home floor, pulling away from a 7-7 deadlock at halftime to win by the impressive score of 24-14 over Washington-Lee High, of Arlington. A capacity crowd watched the slow-moving contest.

Defeated by Eastern in their only scheduled game and a shellacking by Woodrow Wilson in a practice game, the Purple basketers seemed to find the target for the first time this year in the second half, amassing 17 points while the tiring Generals accounted for but seven.

Gonzaga's Fred Rice led the team's pointmaking with nine points, but the General's Center Howard was able to tie the effort. Both reached the total with three foul goals and as many shots from the floor. Though Buddy O'Brien, veteran forward, concentrated for the most part on defensive work, he stepped in to add six points to the Gonzaga triumph.

Navy Five Host Today To Maryland

Middies Favored; Terps to Entertain Duke on Friday; Boxers Vie Saturday

Maryland University's five meets its ancient and honorable rival, Navy, today in the Middies' stronghold at Annapolis. Although the Terrepins do not comprise the best quintet ever to represent the university, the team has been hitting on all cylinders of late and may hang a surprise defeat on the favored Midshipmen.

Win, lose or draw, the battle should sharpen Maryland for its Southern Conference debut against Duke Friday night when the first basketball double-header in recent years will be staged at Ritchie Gymnasium. The preliminary will bring together Maryland's unusually husky freshman team and Blue Ridge College.

The varsity game is expected to be another of the hot games the Terps and Blue Devils have played in their lengthy series and will afford the Terps a chance to even up a score with the invaders who put them out in the semifinal round of the last conference tournament, 35-32.

While he has not definitely named a starting line-up for Maryland's opening boxing match against Duke at Durham Saturday, Coach Heinie Miller has indicated that he will send into action five veteran lettermen and three newcomers.

155 pounds—the real surprise of the team. A Southern Conference 440-yard dash man he is showing promise of developing into a fighter second only to Alperstein in this his first season of boxing.

165 pounds—Newton Cox, another junior letterman who has made remarkable improvement. He was the ace of the workouts Friday.

175 pounds—Morton Steinbach, junior making his first varsity start. Very promising.

Georgetown Leads Recreation League

Georgetown A. C. girls continued in possession of first place in the Washington Recreation League with a 60-10 swamping of Jewish Community Center girls, last night at Jewish Center. Camille Craig, absent from the team's initial victory, was back in the line-up and managed to get 18 points.

Willis Benner Takes Virginia Coaching Job

WILLIS BENNER

Maryland Star Subs For Injured G. W. High Cage Mentor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 10.—Willis Benner, former Maryland University athlete, has been appointed temporary director of athletics at the George Washington High School, to serve until the return of Albert A. Doran, injured yesterday in an automobile accident near Charlottesville. Benner has been serving as assistant athletic director since September, and has tutored the junior varsity football and basketball teams.

With Benner slated to take over the varsity quintet, the junior varsity five will be coached by George Tyler, former Emory and Henry College star, who coached the midget grid team during the past season and also served as varsity baseball coach last year.

According to word received from University Hospital at Charlottesville, where Doran is a patient, he will probably be released on Saturday, but it will be several weeks before he will be able to assume his duties.

Kendall Green Bows to Mounts

The first half of a home-and-home basketball agreement between Mount Mainier High and Kendall Green High, was won last night by the Mounts, 41-25, in the loser's gym. "Chuck" O'Connor, speedy out-rider of the Mounts, earned individual scoring honors for the evening with 14 points, all on field goals. Joe Baumann, his teammate, accounted for 10 of the winning points, though Joe Verrios, of Kendall, was second high for the game.

Though Mount Rainier was never in danger of dropping its early lead, the lads from the Green made it interesting all the way. They scored only 7 points in the first half, but increased the pace during the final period.

Western Host To St. John's Five Today

Undefeated Rivals to Clash; Eastern Faces G. U. Frosh; Three Other Games Listed

Of the five cage games for local schoolboy teams today, the meeting of St. John's and Western High on the latter's court looms as the feature. At Eastern gym, the White Tide moves again—however slowly—against the fast and furious play of Georgetown Frosh. Roosevelt hops to Silver Spring to meet Montgomery-Blair. Anacostia goes to Sherwood High, of Sandy Spring, Md., and Devitt meets up with Maryland Frosh at College Park. Every clash is slated for afternoon play.

Both St. John's and Western have won four straight. They will be fighting to keep those records clean, as well as add another to the streak. To Western it means increased respect in the inter-high round robin starting next week, and the Johnnies depend on an unmarred season for another crack at the city prep title.

St. John's, as for two years, has built defense and offense around little Joey Gallagher, set shot artist and sticky defense man. Cady, Mulvihill, Corrado and the others are the pawns that Joey shifts where he pleases. So far his guidance has led to triumphs over all opposition.

Western has no quarterback, or field general, unless that title can be given Bobby Holloran, sole veteran of the squad. A brilliant crop of novices, however, is at the disposal of Coach Clifton Moore, including Hal Beatty and Ray Brennan, forwards; Jack Price and Frank Dwyer, centers, and Jimmy Horn in the guard spot. Western's strength has been tested in victories over Bethesda, the alumni, G. W. High and Montgomery-Blair.

Frosh Beat Roosevelt

An early lead piled up before Roosevelt High was set accounted for a 34-25 basketball victory for the Maryland Frosh last night in the College Park gym.

Trailing after one-quarter, 12-4, Roosevelt found itself unable to cope with the young Terps until midway of the second session. They had only an 18-13 deficit at the half. During the third period they dropped behind slightly, but matched the victors point for point in the last period.

Duvall, Maryland forward, led the pack in scoring, hanging up 10 points on four field goals and two foul shots. The Rider contingent was headed by lanky Ernest Travis, center, who scored 6 points. It was the local public school's third consecutive loss.

Coach Pays Tribute to Altoona Boy as Both Athlete and Good Fellow

By Jack Munhall.

(This is the fourth in a series of sketches of District basketball coaches and players.)

"One of the grandest fellows and one of the finest players it has been my privilege to handle." That tribute to George Knepley, Maryland's senior forward, by Coach Burt Shipley represents the esteem the student body holds for the slender, mild-mannered fellow who throws in circus shots so frequently that they no longer elicit surprise.

Five-feet, 11 inches and weighing 165 pounds, Knepley for three seasons has been a mainstay of a squad not up to Maryland's high average. But despite the fact that George often is handicapped by less clever and talented teammates, he won unanimous All-Southern Conference selection last season and will go down in history along with All-American Bozie Berger and others as one of the greatest players in Maryland history.

Nor is his sole claim to athletic stardom vested in his singular ability on the court. He plays first base for the Old Liner nine and has gained wide recognition for his fancy fielding and steady if not spectacular hitting. And only his slight build prevented him from developing into a first-class football player, according to Coach Shipley, who believes any boy with such natural athletic talent and splendid co-ordination can master any sport.

Just as Bob Faris, subject of a recent sketch, entered George Washington through the influence of an outsider—his brother—so Knepley matriculated at Maryland because he wished to follow in the footsteps of a boyhood idol. On graduation from the high school in Altoona, Pa., his birthplace and home, Knepley, a scrawny kid weighing only 140 pounds but even then a basketball star, passed up several attractive offers to enroll at Maryland where Willie Wolfe, a product of Altoona High, was the campus' football hero.

Knepley signed for the bachelor of arts course and took a part-time job at the Maryland Dairy Farm, mixing feed for the cows to help defray his tuition and other expenses. Later when Coach Shipley was impressed with the lad's worth both as an athlete and a game youngster struggling to remain in college, he was given aid by the NYA, which allowed him more time for sports.

Knepley, who is only 20 years old, hopes to get a teaching-coaching position following his graduation in June and will further his education. He is a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity. His father is a railroad employe.

More Pay Looms For Directors Of Corporations

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Things were looking up today for those traditionally underpaid part-time employes, corporation directors. For generations it has been a tradition to pay directors of large corporations only on meeting days, for merely $20 in gold, latterly a check. William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in a speech at Fort Worth yesterday, advocated salaries for directors as an "unofficial" solution of the problem of making directors more interested in directing.

Today the North American Co., one of the largest of utilities holding corporations, called a special meeting of stockholders for January 30 to vote upon a plan of corporation simplification and to pass new by-laws.

The new rules would allow the 12 directors up to $50 a day for attending meetings and a total of $500 a month pay for steady work on the part of those who are not officers of the company.

Arming Nations Largest Copper Buyers

Japan, Germany and Czecho-Slovakia were said by the Bureau of Mines yesterday to have been largely responsible for a 1938 increase in United States exports of copper, a material used extensively in the munitions making.

"Nations receiving the largest part of the 20 per cent increase in American exports of refined copper," the bureau said, "were those around which the principal international disturbances centered in 1938—Japan, Germany and Czecho-Slovakia."

SEC Official in Lead For Curb President

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—The New York Sun said today that Ganson Purcell, chief of the trading and exchange division of the Securities and Exchange Commission, appeared to be the leading candidate for president of the Curb Exchange.

A new board of governors will be elected February 14, and will, in turn, select a salaried president at the first meeting, February 23. E. Burd Grubb, once a nonsalaried president, now a member of the stock exchange, was also mentioned, the Sun said.

Wheat Holds Against Lower Prices Abroad

Dip at Chicago Slight Export Clearances Up Corn Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Wheat prices here refused today to follow in full the lower trend of values abroad and, although the market dipped about ½ cent early in the session, the close was unchanged to only ¼ lower than yesterday.

Pit observers reported buying from elevators and processors as well as investors on the slight price decline. Absence of pronounced selling despite recent bearish trade developments indicated, they said, the market temporarily was oversold. The strong underlying support that held declines in check may have come from removal of hedges or buying in connection with sales to the Government subsidy agency, traders said. Rumors of further export business recently have not been confirmed but export clearances have been substantial.

Early lows just below 69 cents a bushel for May and July contracts attracted buying that lifted these two contracts to 69@68⅞ and 69¼@69 respectively at the close. Corn finished ⅛@¾ lower, May 52⅝@52¼, July 53¾; oats ⅛@¼ off; rye ⅛@¼ down, lard unchanged to 3 cents lower.

Steels Head Upturn, Aircrafts Rally; Trading Suffers Substantial Reduction Treasury Issues Firm in Bond Market

New York, Jan. 10.—The present period of waiting for more definite indications of the probable trend of business in the first quarter and of the degree of resistance to administrative direction in Congress is contributing to dull days in financial markets. Trading on the big board today fell away to a mere 713,150 shares, the smallest day since last December 9, and prices were irregular.

A gain of 0.07 point in the composite average was meaningless and fluctuations in virtually all of the speculative leaders were fractional. Utilities, the equipments and the lower grade railroads averaged slightly lower. Best progress of the day was made by the steels and there was a comeback in the aviations after their recent wave of profit taking.

These stocks and the other war issues are being traded in largely on guesses at the moment for there has been no reliable information in the street as to the details which will be contained in the President's coming military program. Even when it is announced, it is apparent that the proposals will be discussed at length in Congress, where there are many members who are becoming worried over the militaristic ideas of the Chief Executive. They do not wish to see the country rush headlong into a program which would be characterized by waste rather than value and they are suspicious that at least a portion of the proposed program is designed to supplant relief activities, which are coming in for a well-needed paring down. The armament message is expected Wednesday.

Business news remains generally favorable but not sufficiently to shake the stock market out of its present rut. Followers of the rails were cheered by the reports of individual roads which were made public today and which showed good gains for the first week of this year as compared with the closing week of 1938. Montgomery Ward & Co. issued a favorable sales statement and the stock gained fractionally.

Steel Shipments

The monthly report of United States Steel on its shipments showed a total of 894,204 tons for December, a gain of 14,551 tons over November. The Bureau of Mines report on export of copper indicated a gain of about 20 per cent in 1938 for this type of business compared with the previous year. From the Chicago furniture market it was reported that retailers are buying heavily to replenish their stocks. These and other bits of trade news leaned definitely on the bullish side but they found the security markets in an unresponsive mood.

Loft was again the most active stock in today's dealings and while it equaled its former high it lost a small fraction on the day. United States Steel, Bethlehem and Republic edged forward as did General Motors and Chrysler. North American was the most active of the aviations and made a small gain along with United Aircraft. Douglas was up nearly 2 points. Marshall Field, in the store group, joined the list of 15 most active stocks, advancing about a point. Best & Co., which declared an extra dividend of 25 cents along with the quarterly payment of 40 cents, was not traded in.

Executives of banks who reported to stockholders at the annual meetings of the institutions today were cautious in their predictions for business, far more so than were the industrial leaders who a week ago made the customary year-end reports and forecasts. James H. Perkins, chairman of the National City Bank, expressed faith that as private effort regains its vigor and confidence, Government activity in the financial field will decrease. Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, in discussing excess reserves, pointed out that such funds are only theoretically loanable.

"In no true sense can credit be 'created' by banks," he said. "Credit power exists in and arises from the world of production and exchange."

Prime Bonds Firm

Listed bond trading was quiet but cheerful today. United States Treasury and best grade corporate bonds were well maintained, with a few fresh highs again reported. Among railroad bonds with a speculative tinge the main trend was upward, with most of the movements confined to fractions. Other speculative groups likewise displayed an irregular tendency toward better levels. Latin-American bonds remained firm in the foreign section. Trading in all listed issues totaled $6,290,000.

Long term Treasury securities were fairly active, with movements in a range from 3-32 point up to 4-32 point down. There were more losses than gains, but all the movements were small. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were quiet and unchanged. In the corporate section telephone debentures of 1961 attained another new high, and a good tone prevailed also in best grade power and light, railroad and industrial bonds.

Secondary railroad bonds were in quiet demand, apparently because the towering prices of best grade investments are forcing some investment money into the medium priced interest payers. Borderline rails were irregular and the default issues mostly soft. Rail and utility holdings bonds improved, as did most industrial convertibles. Local traction bonds again were in demand, but communications issues remained unchanged. Other special groups were dull.

Latin-American default issues were better on the favorable comments by Secretary Hull regarding the Lima conference. Argentine bonds also tended to improve. German and other European default issues moved in a narrow range. Italian and Japanese securities were idle around former levels. Australians dipped slightly, but Canadian and Scandinavian bonds were firm.

Cotton Slips With Selling From the South

January at 8.24 Range Is Narrow Federal Plans in Doubt

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—After a show of firmness at the start, cotton prices resumed a slow slide downward today and finished 1 to 3 points lower. Price movements were restricted to a 10 pound range but trade was active at times despite the narrowness.

New Orleans selling and local liquidation of speculative contracts in new crop positions put the market's absorptive capacity to a test after a slightly higher opening.

Professional traders said they found no incentive for positions on the support side in view of the prevailing uncertainties surrounding Federal policy this year on various aspects of the cotton program.

Mrs. Converse Expires Here In Restaurant

Collateral Descendant Of George Washington Was Writer, Clubwoman

Mrs. Antonia Thornton Converse, a collateral descendant of George Washington and a clubwoman and writer, died suddenly last night while eating dinner at a Pennsylvania avenue restaurant. The cause of death was believed to be heart illness.

Mrs. Converse was accompanied at the time of her death by her cousin, Mrs. Leland Stanford Conness, of the Cumberland Apartments, and a friend, Mrs. Annie Rochester, of 1901 Sixteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Converse belonged to the Cosmos Club, and was a member of the Colonial Dames, the Daughters of 1812, and the Daughters of Runnymede. Some 25 years ago she wrote feature articles for The Washington Post.

Mrs. Converse was the wife of Col. George L. Converse, of Cleveland, Ohio.

She leaves a son, Maj. George L. Converse, jr., of Walla Walla, Wash., and four grandchildren.

Private Forrest L. Binswanger, of the District Police, safety expert and youth organizer, last night was named director of the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs, a post calling for supervision of 10,000 Washington youngsters.

BINSWANGER

Appointed by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, Binswanger succeeds Lieut. John S. Scott, recently granted a transfer to active police duty.

At the same time, James E. Colliflower, president of the club, announced the annual campaign for funds would open February 28.

Maj. Brown, in making the selection, commented on Binswanger's interest in youth safety, his excellent service record as head life guard and swimming instructor at the club's summer camp at Scotland, Md., and his fine work as assistant to Lieut. Scott.

A World War veteran, the new boys' director was cited for heroism in two thrilling rescues at sea. He is commander of Sons of the Legion, Squadron 29, Police and Firemen's Post, American Legion.

Binswinger declared last night that the club would inaugurate a newspaper, showing of educational films, and weekly tours of District scientific buildings. He lives with his wife and two children at 210 Ascot place northeast.

Fathers Join Sons as Guests At Banquet

Attending their annual dinner last night in Fishburn Hall, fathers and sons of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church were advised by Linn C. Drake, District Scout executive, that "a life measured in terms of service is the only life of any value."

Later, the diners, including lads from Scout Troop No. 51, of the church, heard Charles "Charlie" Malone, ace "Redskin" end, describe a few fine points of the game. Bert Wood, former all-high football star, was a guest.

Sponsored by the Brotherhood of Service of the congregation and presided over by President H. K. Boseley, teacher at Woodrow Wilson High School, the banquet included musical numbers by Masters Ernest Coblentz and Robert Moore, of the church, and Sam S. Cotten, soloist at St. John's Episcopal Church, as well as stunts by the troop.

Briefs Warns U. S. Capitalistic System Heads for a Fall

A discussion of the wages and hours law last night in the public forum of the Georgetown Graduate School drew a warning from a former German government economist and labor advisor, Dr. Goetz A. Briefs, that the American capitalistic system, like Germany's, might break down under the effect of excessive social and economic reforms.

The invited forum speaker was Dr. Carroll R. Daugherty, chief economist of the Labor Department's Wage-Hour Division, who defended the act as a "modest attempt" on the part of Government to increase purchasing power and spread employment.

Dr. Briefs, who is now professor of economics at Georgetown, raised the question of how long the capitalistic system, "elastic as it is," can stand the strain of the Government's apparent "reckless approach" to changes in the economic laws.

Miss Petersen, Mrs. Earl Head 2 Nurse Groups

Miss Beard, Red Cross, Pleads for Tradition Of Social Progress

Election of Miss Annabelle Petersen as president of the District Graduate Nurses Association and of Mrs. Elizabeth Earl as president of the League of Nursing Education, was announced last night at a dinner meeting at the Willard Hotel, the closing session of a two-day joint conference on maternity service.

The two groups heard an appeal by Miss Mary Beard, director of Red Cross Nursing service, to carry on the tradition which has placed nurses in the vanguard of social progress.

"In 1939 an incredible thing has happened to the world," she said. "We who grew up in the United States can hardly grasp the things that have come today—the world has gone from secrecy to fear, from fear to hate. We've gone back to a period we thought was gone forever, when cruelty is openly accepted and supported by nations."

From earliest times, she said, doctors and nurses had been connected with the social forces which have produced civilization. "We in the nursing profession have the responsibility to understand the world we live in, and to know wuere we stand."

Other officers whose election was announced include Miss Pearl McIver and Miss Catherine Moran, vice presidents of the Graduate Nurses; Miss Edith Beattie, secretary, and Miss Regina Burns, treasurer; Miss Mary C. Connor and Miss Maud Doherty, members of the board; Miss Caroline Thompson, Miss Mary Eleanor Price and Miss Edna H. Treasure, delegates to the Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Gladys Jorgensen, secretary of the League, and Miss Catherine Moran and Miss Gladys Sellew, members of the board.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

On the front page of a Philadelphia newspaper, recently, this story appeared:

"M. D. Maier, one of the champions of the United States Bridge Association, told a whist story at a dinner.

"'Dr. Parr, a famous whist player of the past,' he said, 'used to come down hard on his partners when they made mistakes.

"'At a country house he was playing one evening with a bishop for partner, and presently his hostess stopped beside him and asked how he was getting on.

"'Dr. Parr gave a nasty little laugh and answered: "Pretty well, considering that I have three opponents."'"

In justice to Jimmy, who is one of the Four Aces, we must credit the affair to a press agent's caprice. We are happy to note, however, that the author of the squib had sufficient conscience to call it a "whist" rather than a contract bridge story, for if the age of the joke is to be considered, it must have had its beginnings long before the birth of Hoyle.

But it is inoffensive in comparison with the allusion to the United States Bridge Association, which has been defunct for more than a year.

Certainly this is a grievous slight to the Philadelphia bridge players, who are the New York experts' most formidable contenders, but possibly bridge news is like that famous porridge Mrs. Cricket made. "Some like it hot. Some like it cold. Some like it in the pot, nine days old."

Hot After Forty Points

However leftover their bridge news may be, there is nothing stale or lukewarm about the Philadelphians' bridge playing. Today's hand shows Charles Goren, Mrs. R. C. Young, John R. Crawford, and Charles J. Solomon, winner of the American Contract Bridge League's match point team-of-four tournament for the second year in succession, making a clean victory over the quartet led by Mrs. Josephine Culbertson at the recent Cleveland tournament.

Goren and Mrs. Young were doubled at four hearts and made the contract against Alphonse Moyse and Mrs. A. M. Sobel, while Crawford and Solomon refused to allow Mrs. Culbertson and Charles Vogelhofer to play the hand, overbidding to five diamonds, at which they were doubled and defeated three tricks. As it was board-a-match scoring, the mere 40 points difference gave the win to the Philadelphia team.

At the Other Table

The way the hand was bid at Goren's table is given in the box. There is no play to four hearts; declarer gives up a diamond and two heart tricks. At Mrs. Culbertson's table the hand was bid like this:

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

NOW comes another thorn to Maryland's bleeding side. The Civil Service Commission announces examinations for the positions of supervising inspector ($3,800); senior inspector ($3,200), and inspector ($2,600)—these positions standing open in the new wage-hour division.

Incidentally, by a year from next July, the Wage-Hour will have—or plans to have—500 of these inspectors. They will be recruited as fast as funds become available to the fund-starved division.

What has this to do with Maryland? Nothing so far as the Wage-Hour is specifically to account for—but in that a whole new batch of Federal jobs is opening up, Maryland is caused grievous concern. It holds the possibilities of taking from Maryland more of the native talent that Maryland declares herself in great need of.

Just the other day, Harry C. Jones, Maryland State employment commissioner, asserted that it is nearly impossible to hold Marylanders in Maryland civil service jobs when the Federal Government offered higher inducement. He urged higher scales for the 4,545 employes and said:

"The extension and probable permanence of the Federal Government's social security program, the increase in the number of employes in many Federal agencies in Washington and the consequent drain on the reservoir from which Maryland must draw replacements for the State service, are seriously affecting the requirements of the State."

The situation is particularly true in the Maryland counties adjacent to the District of Columbia. Of course, the remedy is suggested in the very complaint—to hold its people Maryland would have to make its civil service jobs as attractive as the Federal civil service jobs. But getting the prescription filled is another matter.

Concerning the Wage-Hour examinations: Applicants must have had certain responsible experience in industry or business as an employer, administrative official, or as a recognized employe representative participating in improvement of working conditions; or in a State or Federal agency administering labor laws or investigating employe-employer relationships or economic conditions of wage earners. The minimum age limit is 25; the top, 53. The closing date on applications is February 7.

Add changes of show-fronts: The WPA in the future will lay show-window emphasis on work accomplished instead of on social uplift. . . . Louise Kearney (Miss Interior) is back from St. Petersburg, Fla., her home, where she has spent a brief vacation. She is probably the best girl swimmer in Washington. . . . The PWA administrator, at a press conference not so long ago, reflected:

"I HAVE been asked about these long hours of work performed by employes of PWA and whether this condition is against the wages and hours act. It may be, but it isn't against the fine spirit of PWA. I do it myself, except that I complain. I do not think it is all right, but I admire devotion to duty and patriotism on anyone's part. I wouldn't find fault that PWA workers if they complained bitterly. I have actually had to order some of my executives out of Washington. they were working to such an extent—yet we had to get the work out. I think that it is inconsistent and I do not defend it, but when men and women do it I can't help but admire it on their part."

And there it all is, in a nutshell. Despite what may seem to some as the tremendous number of Federal employes in Washington, the simple fact is that the designers of the New Deal have patterned a bigger job than even they are willing to supply the manpower for. Of course, administrative mismanagement accounts for much overtime. But the job the designers have laid down is too big for any army to grapple in an eight-hour day. It smothers them all.

THE Civil Service Commission buckles down this coming week to a study of competitive promotions and in-service training. From the inside it's said the commission is terribly anxious for this training to include a course in how to write effective Federal letters. Most of them simply don't know how. There's a high technique.

Bob Burns Says—

Personally, I like the idea of tryin' to help the other fella every time you get a chance. I saw a good example of this the other night when I went to the hospital to see a friend. There were two men walkin' up an' down the hall an' one of 'em was a wringin' his hands an' tearin' his hair an' carryin' on somethin' frightful. The other man was tryin' to console him. "Here, now! Here!" he was a sayin'. Don't be takin' it so hard!" Just then the doctor came out an' goes up to this poor bird who's makin' such a fuss, an' he says: "Congratulations, it's an 8-pound boy!" "Wait a minute!" speaks up the other man. "He ain't the father. I am—an' it's number eleven!" "Then, what's he doin' here?" says the doctor. "Well, Doc, it's like this," explains the man. My buddy expects to be a father next week—an' I'm just breakin' him in!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Sammy Jay Meets His Match

Sammy Jay is something of a bully. For this reason some people do not like him. He is inclined to be selfish and drive his smaller neighbors away from a feeding-shelf until he is satisfied, and it sometimes takes a lot to satisfy Sammy for he is a greedy fellow and like wise a thrifty one. He carries off and hides far more than he eats at one time. In this way he takes advantage of his neighbors. When he arrives the smaller folks retire. Bullies are dictators, or think they are.

Mocker the Mocking bird, who is supposed to be strictly a Southerner, had elected to spend the winter in the North, just why I don't know. Perhaps he wasn't feeling equal to a long journey. That is doubtful, however, for he appeared in the best of health and when he flew there was nothing the matter with his wings. And certainly he could have gone South by easy stages until he was beyond the reach of Jack Frost. Whatever the reason he had decided not to go, and here he was in midwinter visiting the feeding station of Farmer Brown's boy.

He had appeared very quietly and unobtrusively. He minded his own business and was quite satisfied with his own company. He seldom arrived until after the other birds had breakfasted. Sammy Jay, being an opportunist, is one of the first to arrive in the morning, believing that the early bird gets the most seeds. Sammy makes no mistake there. So it happened that it was several days after Mocker had taken up residence in the neighborhood before Sammy discovered him.

Then one day Sammy Jay happened to return in the middle of the morning and decided he would like a lunch. He flew to the tree nearest the feeding-shelf. He was just about to fly over to that when he discovered a stranger there. He didn't fly over to join the stranger. He sat quietly watching. It would be well to find out what he could in this way.

"He isn't far from my own size," thought Sammy. "He doesn't look like a fighter. He hasn't hooked claws or a hooked bill, so he isn't a meat eater. He is a stranger here and I don't like strangers. He has no business on that shelf. I'll drive him off and give him such a scare that he will never return."

With this Sammy flew straight for Mocker. As he flew he screamed as only he can, "Thief! thief! thief!" He fully expected to see the stranger take to his wings and to have the fun of chasing him and screaming at him. That is Sammy's idea of fun. You have seen people like that.

To Sammy's surprise and somewhat to his dismay Mocker did not fly. Instead he turned to face Sammy, and Sammy had no sooner alighted on the edge of the shelf than Mocker dashed at him and knocked him off. Now while Sammy may be a bully he isn't a coward. He promptly returned to the attack. He was in a great rage. Yes, sir, he was very, very angry. How dared this harmless-looking stranger oppose him? He would show him who was boss here.

Sammy did just that, but not in the way he had expected to. He showed who was boss by at last turning tail and leaving in something of a hurry with Mocker right behind him for a short distance. Sammy had met his match. Indeed, he had met more than his match. Never again would he try to drive Mocker from that feeding-shelf. In fact he would take good care never to visit it when Mocker was there. It was most disconcerting. This stranger was a fighter yet didn't look like it. The feeding-shelf had a new boss. At least it did if Mocker wanted to be boss.

The fight had been seen by Tommy Tit the Chickadee and Yank Yank the Nuthatch and some others among the smaller feathered folk and there was great rejoicing when Sammy got to flight. And there was the utmost respect for Mocker as they watched him resume his meal as if nothing had happened.
